

Smoke out at dump

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Fire crews were kept busy Sunday and yesterday morning as a fire ripped through the Haliburton landfill, sending thick clouds of smoke billowing over Haliburton village.

It's believed this was the first fire the landfill has seen in almost four years.

Twelve Haliburton volunteer firefighters responded to the blaze at 2:40 p.m. Sunday afternoon. With help from the municipality's roads department, the Ministry of Natural Resources and a local septic pumping service, it took almost six hours to bring the blaze under control.

Fire crews left after 8 p.m., while roads department workers stayed until 9 p.m.

But early yesterday morning, a passing OPP officer noticed smoke and fire crews were called back on the scene for two hours until 7 a.m. At which time, municipal workers were left to cover the area with sand.

Haliburton Fire Chief Miles Maughan estimates between 20,000 to 30,000 gallons of water were dumped on the fire. "But in a situation like this water has little effect. You have to cover it with sand."

The cause of the blaze is not known.

SMOKE GETS IN YOUR EYES: Dysart firefighters had a busy weekend battling a blaze at Haliburton village's landfill site. This is the first fire at the site in at least four years. The cause is still unknown.

Phone breakdown disrupts Kinmount

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Frustration and sometimes panic reigned in Kinmount for two days last week when the aging telephone system broke down.

"It was maddening," says Ver-na Graham, who like others on the 488 exchange, could dial other 488 numbers but could rarely dial out. Incoming calls were able to get through.

That anger turned to panic when Graham's daughter-in-law in Gooderham phoned to say her son had fallen and cut his head, and asked Graham to phone ahead to the Minden Hospital so a doctor would be waiting.

But of course Graham couldn't reach the hospital, which is a 286 number. She drove to Dettman's Store in Kinmount, tried to use the phone there and finally ended up driving to the hospital herself, reaching it before her bleeding grandson did.

"It wasn't serious but I didn't know it at the time. His head was bleeding quite badly," she said a few days after the accident. "It's really annoying because it could have been life-threatening."

"It totally zoned us right out," says John Dettman, who uses the phone to place orders for the store. "It was really inconvenient working that way."

"I missed my fax machine," says Guy Scott, across the street at Scott's IGA and hardware store. "But we were more interested in people phoning us for business" and this was still possible.

Gary Wood, Bell's local manager of network maintenance, says the Kinmount office has older technology. "A couple of critical relays had gone out of adjustment through wear and tear and it was difficult to find the problem because so many people were try-

Fifteen injured in several accidents

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

The Minden OPP reports 16 accidents and 15 injuries last week, but the weekend was really quiet, says Cnst. Mike Maybee.

There were no accidents reported Friday of the long weekend. Six minor accidents occurred on Saturday, but there were no injuries reported.

On Sunday June 30, Robert Daley, 39, was riding a motorcycle on County Road 14 with daughter Nichole, 7, as a passenger. They were southbound when the motorcycle went off the left side of the road and rolled over.

Mr. Daley was taken by air ambulance to Sunnybrook Hospital and his daughter was airlifted to Sick Children's in Toronto. Their conditions are unknown. The OPP reports that Mr. Daley did not have a license to operate a motorcycle.

On Monday July 1 at 8:50 p.m., Thomas Winnill, 42, of Welland, was eastbound on Hwy 121 just west of Buckhorn Road, when he lost control, going over the guideposts.

Passenger Alfred Savard, 21, of Haliburton was critically injured and airlifted to Sunnybrook Hospital where he is listed in stable but serious condition.

A second passenger, Robert Dunbar, 36, of Haliburton, was injured, as was Mr. Winnill. Both were taken to Haliburton Hospital.

On Tuesday July 2 at 1:24 a.m., Arliss Collins, 24, of Toronto, lost control of his car north of Airport Road in Stanhope. The car rolled over several times into the ditch.

Collins and passenger Mark Cross, 25, of Toronto, were both injured, and a second passenger, Douglas Croft, 33, of Toronto, was taken to a Toronto hospital by airlift.

"We don't usually have a terrible number of accident on the long weekend," says Sergeant Adams. "Traffic coming in doesn't cause the problem, it's people driving cottage roads who fail to share which often results in accidents."

PEERING INTO THE PAST

Bank machine never rests on Canada Day weekend

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

If the line-ups outside the instant teller machine at Haliburton's Bank of Commerce could be used as an indicator of which way the economy is going, the balance is no longer weighing in favour of the recession.

Between Friday morning and Tuesday morning on the Canada Day weekend, there were more than 1,500 exchanges at the busy corner. Twice the machine ran out of money, and the line-ups often stretched down Maple Avenue.

"If they're getting cash, that means they're spending money here," says CIBC manager Ron Berry, adding that every effort was made to make sure the machine was well-stocked. "There was a run on the machine so there must have been a lot of money spent."

Many people no longer seem to travel with cash, Berry notes.

"Everybody travels on plastic nowadays, even the camp kids."

Usage of the machine — the only one in the county at present — is increasing all the time and is much higher than last summer, when it was first installed. Winter usage indicates it's not just visitors who like the quick withdrawal of funds.

People with accounts at any bank can use the machine, as long as their branch has issued them a card and pin number.

Teachers ratify contract, accept average increases

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Three months after sitting down at the bargaining table, Haliburton County high school teachers have ratified a new two-year contract.

The contract calls for teachers to receive a 5.5 per cent salary increase beginning September 1, 1991, and a cost of living allowance, plus a one per cent increase in 1992.

"We feel good about it and feel the trustees did a really good job in listening to our side," said Walter Tose, Haliburton Highlands Secondary School teacher and chairman of the teacher's negotiating committee.

His positive attitude was shared by Len Salvatori, board trustee and chairman of the board's negotiating committee. "They received an average increase compared to boards across the province," he said. "The recession was in the back of all our minds and that helped us decide where we would spend our money."

Provisions were made in the teachers' benefit packages to improve dental coverage and extend health-care in the first year. In the second year, more improvements in health-care were guaranteed and the teachers' long-term disability plan was revised.

Teachers had asked for 100 per cent funding, but this was negotiated down to 90 per cent. "We felt the taxpayers shouldn't have to pay 100 per cent of the burden and went with 90 per

'Arrive alive,' say two local teens

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Traditionally, summer is the time to hit the open road. And as Ontario's highways and bi-ways fill with happy travellers, the Attorney General's Office kicks off its Arrive Alive summer campaign to ensure everyone reaches their destination safely.

The ministry has set aside $140,000 to fund 37 community groups to promote public awareness about the dangers of drinking and driving. In Haliburton, two local teens have been hired for the summer to work in conjunction with the OPP.

"I believe in the cause," says Tanya Little, one of the students working on the project. "I have a son and I'm concerned about his safety. This was a perfect opportunity to get involved."

The young women, Little and Dorothy Sanderson, are in the process of polishing up the final details of their public awareness campaign. Although still in the planning stages, the women have marked down some of the local events they will visit.

"It sounds like a lot of work. But it's not really that much," says Sanderson, describing the preparation behind the campaign. This includes constructing a portable information booth they can transport to each function. The two also have designed T-shirts they'll wear, as well as posters to decorate their booth and the OPP community police office in Haliburton. They also will have a float in the summer parade using a smashed up car.

But for the last several weeks, since being chosen by Haliburton Highlands Secondary School teacher Wanda Mole, who acts as supervisor, the pair have been studying drinking and driving statistics.

"They're unbelievable," says Sanderson, describing some of the things she has read about: alcohol playing a role in 50 per cent of all traffic fatalities and 30 per cent of all personal injury crashes; the maximum penalty for impaired driving causing death is 14 years imprisonment and 10 years driving prohibition; in 1985, 47 per cent of drivers killed in crashes had been drinking or were impaired; younger drivers (aged 16-24) are more susceptible than older drivers to collisions when they have been drinking.

This latter fact did not come as much of a surprise to the women, who are familiar with local young people. "There's an awful lot of drinking in smaller communities," says Little. However, Sanderson is quick to point that many of their friends are aware about the dangers and arrange for a designated driver.

Recent ministry findings suggest between 1980 and 1989, the number of alcohol-related crashes in the province have declined by more than 40 per cent. But at the same time, the number of people licensed to drive has increased by 26 per cent.

Keeping this in mind, the pair will shove their campaign into gear as soon as possible. "We're trying to get to as many community events that we can this summer," says Sanderson. Some of the events they've already been booked into are Haliburton's Bluegrass Festival, Wilberforce's Agriculture Fair and Gooderham's Horseshoe Days.

Besides just information and pamphlets, the pair will also sell glasses of alcohol-free punch and give away copies of the recipe. Proceeds from the punch sale will go to various hospitals which care for children injured in car crashes.

If you have any questions, or need information about drinking and driving, drop by the OPP station in Haliburton to see Sanderson and Little.

ARRIVE ALIVE BY DRIVING SAFELY: This summer everyone in Haliburton County will have the chance to learn about the dangers of drinking and driving thanks to the efforts of Dorothy Sanderson and Tanya Little, who have been hired by the province to head a local public awareness campaign.

Specialist called in to solve Bell problems

ing to call. We finally found it in the quiet of the night.

"The older technology does take more maintenance."

Normally Bell's machines print out where the trouble spots are, but in this case, "the phone was about to ring but the call dropped out. We were going without a map and that's what took so much time."

Specialists were called in, including one man who left London at 3:30 a.m. to get to Kinnmount as quickly as possible.

"We put in one heck of an effort," says Wood. "We kept the men in the building and fed them there — one man slept in his car."

Everyone was dedicated to it. Our first priority was to restore service and we stuck to it."

In case it took them longer to fix the problem, Wood had a couple of cellular phones on hand. If the "call-out" had lasted much longer, these would have been placed in strategic locations in and around Kinnmount for everyone to be able to use.

These problems should be a thing of the past, however. By 1993, Bell is hoping to replace the old analogue technology with digital equipment. "We're looking at capital dollars and what's available but we want to do it as soon as possible," says Wood.

MNR warns fire season is upon us

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Forest fires in Quebec may be helping to prevent the spread of flames throughout the Highlands.

Because the fires' damage has been so widely reported in the press, several people have phoned the Ministry of Natural Resources' fire station in Haliburton, asking if it's safe to light fires here.

"We're encouraging people to use something other than fire" for heat and cooking, says Haliburton manager Tom Russell. "If you don't have to have a campfire, use your propane stove or barbecue."

Russell is also warning that should people have a campfire, they have to take extra efforts to put it out. The ground is very dry and even if the fire on the surface is doused, the heat might cause undergrowth to smolder and then catch on fire a few days later. "The big thing is just to make sure their fire is out when they leave."

Until there's a lot more rain, no burning permits are being issued, except at a few landfill sites where brush has been collected. If the piles are left to grow, the MNR is afraid someone will set them on fire and create a huge problem.

"It's extremely dry but we haven't had many fires," Russell says. Usually April and May are the station's busiest months, but it was the high temperatures and dryness of June which caused today's concern. Last weekend, in expectation of something happening, crews "were all dressed up with no place to go", although they did help with a couple of lightning fires in Algonquin Park.

Last week's rain "did virtually nothing for us so we're afraid July can be busy."

High taxes nothing less than legal robbery, says angry Dysart cottager

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

People who "invested our hard-earned money in real estate in Haliburton" should be treated more equitably at tax time, says a Dysart cottager.

Between 1989 and 1991, James Martin's property taxes rose "by a huge 49 per cent and that is nothing short of legal robbery of your most valuable asset, your summer population. I hope that you are receiving many similar complaints and that you will be persuaded to greatly modify your tax structure to a more just and fair one."

"Contrary to the obvious opinion of your council, we city slickers are not all big time money makers," Martin wrote.

Council indeed has received many such letters, and is just as upset about the tax increases. In 1991, Dysart kept its municipal increase to .26 per cent, but with a county levy increase of more than 33 per cent, and a board of education levy of almost 10 per cent, property taxes rose 12.25 per cent.

"Certainly we're not happy with the tax increase," said Councillor Murray Fearrey, who fought voraciously against the county's 1991 budget.

At least one Dysart taxpayer has refused to pay his county portion of the tax bill. Dozens more have lodged complaints at the municipal offices. All complaints are being forwarded to the county and board offices.

Cottagers endorse municipal hopefuls

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

Mountain Lake property owners held their annual meeting last Saturday, endorsing two candidates for the November elections in Anson, Hindon and Minden.

Grant Plooard and Jean Anthon have announced they will contend for two of the five seats on council.

Plooard, a full-time resident living on Horseshoe Lake Road, said that he was faced with the choice to either sit back and complain about things or get off the fence and see if he could do any better.

"I'm sure going to try," he said. "We will be open to all ratepayers and we will be a council that can get along together."

Anthon is familiar to Mountain Lake cottagers as past-president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations and past president and current executive of the Mountain Lake Property Owners' Association.

She is waiting to see what kind of campaign evolves before addressing specific issues, but the issues that will likely dominate the election will be market value assessment, the tax situation in general and growing environmental concerns.

Indeed, the two guest speakers at the meeting were Len Munt and Kim Hussey, who both brought urgent news on the environmental front.

Munt, the county's Gypsy moth co-ordinator, said there was no eradication of this insect in sight, only methods of controlling it until natural forces got hold of it.

A slide show presented the life cycle of the Gypsy moth, telling residents to scrap off a mass of moth eggs on trees, cottages and cars whenever they came across it.

One person asked what they could do if they didn't fall into the designated block sprayed by the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Munt said ground sprays can reach trees 60 feet high, and it might be possible to arrange for private aerial spraying.

Although the MNR intended to end spraying for Gypsy moth this year, cottager Lynn Dunbar has arranged for spraying next year. She will be pushing for the entire lake to be sprayed in 1992.

Kim Hussey, a biology student from the University of Waterloo working on a 22-week contract with the MNR, told the group about the Ministry's stewardship program, now in its first year.

She encouraged Mountain Lake cottagers to appoint a master steward who would keep abreast of local environmental concerns and bring these to the MNR's attention.

"The stewardship program can educate the general population as well as property owners of the need to protect our eco-system," says Hussey. "The MNR believes that public involvement is essential to resource management."

Creation of the stewardship program might also encourage all lake associations to set their own standards regarding shoreline road allowances, she added.

Also discussed at the meeting was light pollution caused by cellular phone towers. Ian Spenser said he did not get much co-operation from Minden council when he complained about the lights from the tower located on the Hart Lodge property.

A motion was passed to investigate the procedures for the installation of the tower, to determine if any law was contravened, with a view to making a protest if it appears warranted.

HERE'S HOW IT IS FOLKS: Mountain Lake Property Owners Association President Bob Hurrell goes over the items on the agenda at the annual meeting at the White Water Reserve clubhouse on Saturday. Hurrell reminded residents to take part in posting identification signs at cottages for safety's — and novice visitors' — sake.

Boshkung cottagers want to stop full MVA

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

The Boshkung Lake Property Owners Association will get a ratepayers' meeting to discuss the impact of a change to full Market Value Assessment.

At the association's meeting Saturday, Reeve Harry Davis said a meeting could be set up for someone from the assessment office to explain the new method of property tax assessment.

"We voted against any part of (full MVA) last February," Davis said. "We wanted to study it, to talk to the associations and to people in general."

A switch to full MVA would change the way property taxes are computed, but the main difference is the updating of the base assessment year of 1980, by which Stanhope properties are presently judged, to a more recent date.

Since, in the 1980s, shoreline properties appreciated at a much higher rate than other residential and commercial properties, reassessing them would stick shoreline properties with a larger part of the tax bill.

Reassessments are done on a four-year basis, so if Stanhope switched to full-MVA the base year would become 1988. Davis said "1988 was a high year, and I don't think it's fair to use."

An association member said property owners in Muskoka had appealed their assessments on the basis that 1988 wasn't acceptable because prices were at their peak, and had won.

There was disagreement over what type of meeting should be held. Some wanted a simple, information session where someone would merely explain what full MVA would do, while others wanted to have more of a political rally to express anger at the county's interest in bringing in full MVA county-wide.

Some suggested an arena be booked and all Reeves and deputy-Reeves be brought in to explain what they thought about full MVA. Ratepayers would be given a chance to vent their spleen.

Association president Frank Gump argued against the latter proposal, saying it would be logistically impossible to arrange, and after some debate a motion passed asking for a township-wide meeting with an assessment official to explain full MVA.

Full MVA drew the wrath of many association members, for a variety of reasons. Some felt that the process of bringing the new system in was mysterious and devious. One woman said "I have a terrible feeling that behind my back someone's going to do a reassessment and one day I'll find a humungous bill."

Others argued that the property tax system is unfair. One said cottagers get few services for their tax dollars, but are forced to pay larger and larger amounts of the tax bill.

But another wondered if a lot of the anger about full MVA was a resistance to change. "I think we should all go back and search our souls about this. We're a privileged group, and you should go back over the things you see wrong, other than just a privileged group getting a bite. Some parts of the bite I don't like, but we should tell our representatives the things we don't like."

Lightning blasts fuse box at PineStone Inn Thursday

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

Fire crews were called to PineStone Inn last Thursday night in the pouring rain, but as it turned out, there was no cause for alarm.

"There was no smoke and no fire," says volunteer firefighter Dan Wind as he made a mad dash back to his car in the torrential downpour.

"Lightning might have hit somewhere and caused a short in one of the boxes".

Three trucks were on the scene just after 7 p.m. after the main panel in the Inn's lobby signaled trouble in the block suite which has 20 rooms.

"Lightning hit pretty hard and put a jolt through the box in that building, knocking it out," said PineStone maintenance manager David Nimigom.

Bad boaters may be bashed by Drag Lake association

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Drag Lake Property Owners Association may borrow a page from the Muskoka Lakes Association's books and try to embarrass boaters into better behaviour.

"It's getting more dangerous every year," says president Al Ferguson, a few days after the association meeting.

"There was a suggestion about banning motor boats with engines over 9.9 horsepower but that didn't get too much support. But it raised the issue that people aren't paying attention with their boats."

In Muskoka, whenever someone displayed bad boating behaviour — driving too close to shore or swimmers, going too fast — people were encouraged to take a photograph of the crime in action. These photos were then published as punishment and warning to other boaters who weren't being courteous of others' right to enjoy the lakes.

"The only thing we can do is something like that," says Ferguson. Perhaps in the newsletter they will have a "bricks and bouquets" section, listing good and bad lake behaviour. "Publicity to scare them will probably be the best thing. People will probably tone down a lot."

Other items discussed at the meeting included the strengthening of lake trout populations. "The fish seem to be coming back with the winter closure" although there's a possibility the ban on ice fishing will be permanent.

Two-year contract best

cent," said Salvatori. Extra time was also allotted to give HHSS department heads the time they need to carry out planning and monitoring duties. "There's no point in having a head who can't help out the new teachers in their departments," said Salvatori.

Tose admitted that at other schools this type of time arrangement was not common. But Salvatori pointed out that HHSS is the only high school in the county and its department heads can't look to other schools for input and advice. "In this area, two heads can't get together and discuss what's best."

Initially the teachers had no intent of negotiating a two-year contract, but in the end decided it would be the best move. "We looked at it and discovered that at the end of two years we would be where we wanted to be," said Tose. "The bottom line is if local teachers and trustees are happy with it, you do it."

Salvatori agreed and said a two-year contract saves the hassle of facing each other again next year. "To be at the table all the time is so time-consuming," he said. "It can also quickly develop a strained relationship between the teachers and the board."

Hunting ban worries council

by MARTHA PERKINS
EDITOR

The following items were discussed in brief at the July 8 Dysart et al council meeting.

Algonquin Park

Council is not pleased with proposed hunting restrictions at Algonquin Park, which plans to close hunt camps in Clyde and Bruton Townships, which are part of Dysart et al. "There's some pretty dangerous statements which I think we should be concerned about," said Councillor Murray Fearrey, responding to a recent report on proposed changes. "They're going to continue logging (but with no hunting or trapping) the beavers will flood everything so there won't be logging. Everything those tree huggers have suggested is in here."

Fearrey is also worried that if the McCrae Addition, a 20,000 tract of crown land in Eyre Township, is made part of the park, Dysart will lose $60,000 a year which the province pays in lieu of lost property taxes. Council will fight the changes.

Guilford dump

The Ministry of the Environment says the West Guilford dump is not operating under proper conditions. When inspected, there was no attendant on duty. "They have a problem with garbage strewn about the site. This exists because of the method of depository, compacting and covering. There were numerous wild animals foraging through the garbage. There has been no groundwater or surface water sampling done to see if leachate contamination has occurred. There was no evidence of burning," says the June 3 MOE report.

Ice rental fees

Any group wishing to put in ice at the Haliburton arena in August must pay $4,000. Ice rental fees are slightly higher than normal for September but by October 15 the rate will drop to: $28 an hour for minor hockey and figure skating; $63 an hour for men's league; $50 an hour for schools; and $68 an hour for tournaments. Rental of the auditorium will be $10 an hour for meetings.

New lights

Council will take advantage of Ontario Hydro's proposal to install high-pressure sodium lights throughout the municipality. The new lights, which give off a soft yellow glow, will save enough energy to have the program pay for itself in two and a half years. Hydro will pay 25 per cent of the costs.

"You can't turn away from saving that much energy," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater.

Noisy boats

While agreeing that noisy boats are a problem, council doesn't know if it has the legal authority to enforce a by-law restricting such noises. "You're wasting time and money to send a by-law officer out to say 'Yep, it's too loud.' That won't stand up in court," said Reeve Bill Davis, responding to a Miskwabi Area Cottagers' Association request. Leadbeater said "If you create enough noise to disturb your neighbours you've got to stop," and a decibel meter is not expensive. "If you know where a (problem boat) is tied up, you can go to the owners and say this isn't satisfactory."

Council will get a legal opinion about its authority and whether its present noise by-law is suitable if charges are laid.

Public craves Rotary composters

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Home composters will soon be a familiar sight around Dysart et al thanks to the Haliburton Rotary Club's composter campaign. In less than two months, the club has sold more than 1,000 of the environmentally-friendly recyclers.

"The response has been phenomenal," says Amin Shivji, chairman of Rotary's environmental committee.

The Ministry of the Environment pays two thirds of the purchase price. Residents can pick between two styles of composters, Rubbermaid's Green Cone and the square Soilsaver, for the cost of $20.

To allow people to take advantage of the deal, Rotary attached a form to each tax bill mailed out in May, explaining where a composter could be picked up at the reduced rate.

Close to 7,000 forms went out and so far, approximately 1,100 ratepayers have expressed interest.

"This way above what we anticipated," says Shivji. Among the two style of composters, the 12-cubic-foot-square Soilsaver is the most popular. People with gardens like to use its finer compost as fertilizer.

"We hope to have all the composters out by August. But it depends how quickly the government releases the funds," he says. Rotary pays for the composters and then is reimbursed by the MOE.

Due to the lack of storage space, composters are ordered as they are needed. It takes three days for them to arrive.

With the success of the composters, Shivji is already planning Rotary's next environmental project, a campaign to send recycled unused medicines to needy countries.

Stanhope avoids big tax increase

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Creative planning and the county's budget were instrumental in Stanhope council's decision to avoid large tax increases in this year's budget.

Stanhope taxpayers will see a 10.5 per cent increase in property taxes, including county and education levies.

"Looking at things on a whole, I think we came out well, considering we're faced with a big county levy and bigger than usual board of education levy," said Reeve

Harry Davis.

Ratepayers will see a 33.3 per cent increase of their county levy and a 17.6 per cent increase in their education levy. The municipality's levy will increase by six per cent.

This means a ratepayer with an average property assessed at $500 can expect to pay $708.95 in property taxes, an increase of $67.30 from last year.

Overall, Stanhope council expects to spend $868,815 in 1991, an increase of $57,000, or seven per cent, from last year.

Davis said everyone involved in planning this year's budget kept things to a minimum. "We went through it with a fine tooth comb," he said.

Plan outlines how much garbage being created

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Haliburton County is one step closer to developing its much talked about Waste Management Master Plan, as a 53-page preliminary report for the first stage of the plan's three stages is released to the public.

"It's a good report," says Len Munt, co-ordinator for the county's WMMP. "It shows that everything is going well. But it's a big job, especially when you're dealing with the province and the county."

At the suggestion of the Ministry of the Environment, the second stage of the plan was altered. Following the first, which basically called for the collection and review of data, the second stage was divided into three areas.

The first two called for the identification of environmentally suitable areas to build and expand landfill sites, and secondly, an analysis of waste management systems. At the MOE's urging, these steps were switched, allowing alternative waste systems to be analyzed before viable landfill sites could be picked out. "We did this so the public could get involved more in the systems selection," said Munt, adding that expanding or building a landfill site is a long-involved procedure.

But according to the report, whether all the county's landfill sites have to be expanded depends on the outcome of capacity studies.

Four of the county's 22 public landfills have been reviewing their capacity. These include: Anson, Hindon and Minden's Scotch Line Site, which has an estimated 50 years of capacity remaining, providing it has a new operational plan; Stanhope's Hawk Lake Site, which is in the process of expanding. A new capacity report is due sometime this year; the remaining sites with completed reports include Iron Mine in Lutterworth and the Gooderham Landfill.

The report says most sites have an estimated 10-15 years of use remaining. This suggests the county's landfill sites will run out of room within 20 years. Among possible solutions, such as more sites and expansion, it suggests that arrangements could be made to transport trash to nearby sites outside of Haliburton County.

The county presently spends close to $540,000 annually to manage its waste. (Costs vary between the municipalities). This is equivalent to $20.09 for each household, which results in a cost of $51 per tonne of landfilled waste.

Alongside costs, the report describes exactly how much waste is produced. In 1990, Haliburton County produced 10,587 tonnes of waste. This is based on the estimation that permanent residents generated an average of 2.0 kg of trash per day, while seasonal residents generated half the amount. (These figures take into account commercial, industrial, construction and demolition wastes).

Overall, residential waste accounted for 59 per cent of waste directed to landfill sites. At the present rate, by the year 2012 annual waste quantities may be as high as 13,200 tonnes. But this amount is reduced by half if diversion rates of 25 per cent and 50 per cent are achieved by 1992 and 2000, as HEAVE HO!! Tow truck driver Paul Windsor hauls an old Chevy from the river at Kinmount last Thursday. The driver was pushing the stalled car when he lost control and it ended up in the drink Wednesday night.

Chevy takes a dip in Burnt

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

It was a wet night for an old Chevy which ended up in the Burnt River in Kinmount last Wednesday night.

Witnesses say the incident occurred at about 8:30 when the driver stepped out of his stalled car to steer it off Hwy 503. When the car got ahead of him, it rolled down the hill, across Station Road, and straight into the river.

OPP were on the scene in the morning with a diver who hooked chains to the car 50 feet under water. A tow truck pulled the car out of the river.

"The driver was last seen on foot heading north," said OPP Cnst. Patricia Pollock. Witnesses say the man is a local, but no one knows his name.

The 1970 green Chevelle is registered to Patricia Finney of Mississauga. The OPP hope to find out who was driving the car that evening once they have contacted Ms. Finney.

Greg Buzzell, a tow-truck driver, said he tried to hold the man, but he was too big. He also remembers pulling the same car out of a swamp in the area the previous weekend.

Making waves

Saturday in the Highlands was beautiful, sunny and warm, drawing people out of their homes and cottages to enjoy the harvest of summer sun. The roads were fairly busy, cars were parked outside cottage doors and barbecues sizzled. Yet when one looked out on the lakes, all seemed relatively quiet. Within sight there were three or four boats, some pulling waterskiers, others pulling on-ly fishing lures behind them. But there was still so much space between them, they were more like a blip on a radar map than a troubling swarm of pleasure seekers.

Haliburton County has not yet lost the luxury of peace and quiet, even though cottages and homes line most shores with faithful regularity. It is possible to sit on your dock and forget the 21st Century is just around the decade. The lakes can provide respite from the hectic pace and "man-madness" of the city — if we, and our neighbours, let them. Trouble only starts when people think the Highlands is a beer commercial come to life. The living is easy, the tribe of friends is gathered 'round, the alcohol flows and with it, out flow all cares and concerns. Ahhh, say the revellers. Oh, oh, say their neighbours who like to believe get-away country does not mean getting away from our social obligations of politeness and respect for those around us. Move the beer commercial from the shore on-to the lake, and we really do have trouble.

Most boaters will never do anything to harm or inconvenience those around them. They are responsible, following all the written and unwritten rules of the lake — stay far away from shore and swimmers, slow down when near smaller boats, be aware of the amount of wake you're creating and the damage it can cause to shorelines and people. Is there still the obligatory wave to passing boaters? It's the few boaters whose ego is larger than their engine who create the bad impressions. Ego, because you'd have to be pretty vain to think people on the lake actually enjoy the vroom, boom, vroom, boom of your engine bouncing in and out of the water, or are suitably impressed by your speed when you roar past swimmers with a few metres to spare. But as with most people who base their feelings of self-worth on their possessions or media-driven images, usually such egos are very sensitive to the pin prick of an angry word.

Society will never be able to outlaw stupidity or immaturity. They will always be with us — as will the self-centredness of youth. Laws governing engine size are fine when a lake is first being developed, but it's not fair to impose one set of tastes — canoes shall rule the dominion — on everybody else. Posting of speed restrictions through channels and near shore is preaching to the converted, whose common sense already tells them to slow down. Rules are fine when they are enforced, but everyone knows there is only one police boat in the Highlands and even if the OPP were to get another, there aren't enough officers to man them.

Unfortunately, however, society is learning that courtesy, politeness and even common sense are not innate traits. Some people need to be told that their behaviour is intolerable. If a neighbouring cottager's boat is scaring your children, tell the neighbour, and get your other neighbours to do the same. Give the trouble maker the benefit of the doubt by assuming he or she doesn't realize his or her behaviour is bothering others. Be firm but polite, because politeness breeds politeness and threats just lead to a rivalry which will spoil your cottage days. If the trouble does persist, document it and phone the OPP or your lake association representative.

Above all, remember that your behaviour is an example to the others. Do onto other lake residents as you would have them do unto you, thank you very much. Teach your children that driving a boat is a privilege and just because there are no yellow lines down the middle of the lake, and no speed limits posted on the shore, rules still exist and must be followed. Likewise, don't shoot the messenger if told your 17-year-old son is one of the trouble makers. We have something special here, and everyone shares the commitment of having to protect it. M.P.

Campsite letters misleading

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I have found the substance and tone of some letters regarding the "Pelaw Lake Campsites" debate both disturbing and misleading. A response is warranted.

First of all, Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve has not applied to create additional campsites or development of other kinds on Pelaw Lake. We do have 11 fully approved, unserviced campsites on our portion of the Lake. Each is carefully maintained by conscientious tenants.

About 30 percent of the lake is owned by Haliburton Forest. A further 30 percent is owned by Mr. Habermann. The remaining 40 percent has been developed for cottage lots by third parties.

The Municipality of Dysart's Planning act of 1977 determined that 17 residential lots would be the legal limit for Pelaw Lake. In the early 1980s the Municipality overrode its own by-laws to allow the subdivision of 28 such lots. For reasons unknown to us the 28 lots designated to the entire lake have been developed on 40 percent of the lakeshore.

Simple arithmetic suggests that 30 percent of those 28 cottage lots should have been allocated to Haliburton Forest, a further 30 percent to Mr. Habermann, and the remaining 40 percent of the lots to residential development by other interests. This would have protected completely the rights of all parties involved.

Environmental and aesthetic principles also suggest that it is unwise to place 160 percent of the lake's allotment into just 40 percent of its shoreline. This questionable development approach has been criticized in the past and will no doubt cause problems in the future.

We feel it is especially inappropriate to criticize the operation of Haliburton Forest on environmental grounds. Countless non-profit, private and government agencies, as well as people with vision beyond their cottage lot have expressed their admiration for this place where environmental ethics, conservation, and commerce are combined in a unique management model.

It is unethical for anyone to adopt a "no development, but only after I've moved in" attitude. If Mr. Habermann's request is to be denied it should be solely for sound and sensible reasons.

Opinions of Forest unfair

To the Editor:

I have watched with interest and concern the debate conducted on your pages about the creation of 13 campsites on Pelaw Lake. I think it is important that people have the chance to express an opinion about issues, but those opinions should be both fair and polite.

In the last few weeks I've read uncommonly bitter letters describing in petty detail this or that campsite, how much tax someone may or may not be paying, the degree of environmental damage caused by slow versus fast boats, the relative merits of a cottage versus a campsite, the number of moose one has seen recently, and the morality of owning a satellite dish.

It disturbs me that a place I value, Haliburton Forest, has been dragged into a debate about someone else's request for campsite development and been unjustly criticized as well. That's why I'm writing: to defend in general the principles I think guide Haliburton Forest and Wild Life Reserve in the use and management of their private lands.

I am a self-employed map-maker. For 10 years now I have explored by canoe, snowshoe and especially on foot thousands of square kilometres

On Wednesday, July 17, the Haliburton & District Lions Club is launching its first boat race at the Drag River, behind Kennedy Sport and Tackle in Haliburton starting at 7 p.m. The club made 300 little boats and sold them with the proceeds to go to the CNIB, and they are expecting to raise about $900 first prize in the boat race is $300, second prize $200 and third prize $100. They tell me that chairman Ron Barr (perhaps in a costume) will wade in and pick up the winning boat.

It's been a long time since Head Lake Park has looked as good as it does at the present time. Jim Elstone and his crew from Golf Green Industries are to be congratulated for the manner in which they have gone about their work in beautifying the park. The grass is nice and green, the grounds are free of litter and the flowers look simply grand. Let's make it a point to co-operate with the ground keepers to make this one of the finest parks in the area.

It's just simply taking too long for the traffic lights to change at the main intersection in Haliburton where Maple Avenue crosses Highland Street. Traffic is lined up sometimes for two or three blocks and it all seems to be so unnecessary. Surely to goodness council will see to it that the timer is adjusted to the point where the lights will change at faster intervals and the traffic will start to move along at a much smoother pace.

Come out this weekend and see some fun baseball action at the Haliburton Ball Diamond when the Haliburton Koolers will hold their 2nd annual Lob-ball Tourney starting on Saturday morning at 8:30 a.m. and finishing up Sunday afternoon.

Joan Moore, secretary of the Minden Agricultural Society has asked me to remind our readers that the Haliburton County Fair Prize List books for 1991 are in circulation and may be picked up at the office of the Chamber of Commerce in Minden, the Intra Town and Country Travel Consultants and the Rails' End Gallery in Haliburton at McMahon Feed and Harness, Country Fabrics and Crafts and the Minden Times in Minden.

The following story just goes to prove that it pays to advertise in the Haliburton County Echo. The Wilberforce United Church Women advertised their Annual Strawberry Supper which was held at the Lloyd Watson Centre on June 29th. The supper turned out to be a wallowing success. The turnout was above all expectations. A total of 150 people were in attendance last year, so this year the ladies prepared for 200. Believe it or not, 300 hungry people showed up while 50 had to be turned away at the door. We understand in an effort to feed all the people they had to skim back on some of the servings and more food had to be brought in from Agnews Store. The U.C.W. would like to apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused some people attending this supper.

Rumours seem to be flying around town to the effect that the Hide-A-Way Cafe in Stedmans Mall in Haliburton is for sale. The owners Shirley and Tim Masson told me the other day that the business is definitely not for sale.

A few local Notes . . . The Royal Canadian Legion at Haliburton chartered a bus to Toronto last Thursday and 40 people were on board when the bus made its way to the SkyDome where the passengers took in the ball game between the Minnesota Twins and the Blue Jays . . . The caboose which serves as a Tourist Information Centre during the summer months is in bad need of a paint job . . . The Directors of the Ontario Open Fiddle and Step Dance Contests in Bobcaygeon are proud to announce that their 1991 event will open on Thursday, July 25th with a kickoff performance by Canada's own Stompin' Tom Connors.

POINTS OF VIEW

Music is a powerful medicine

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

THERE WAS ANOTHER pianist in the Legion last Thursday night. He was just what the doctor ordered. We bought a couple of his tapes, one of which is playing as I write. I need it, because I'm sitting here wondering how I'm going to get through this week. I've done myself in on my calendar again, which is bad enough. But what's really bothering me is that Judy's not here to do all these things we always do together in the summer.

Judy is out in Vancouver fighting the big 'C'. We saw her for one brief day in spring. She put off her treatments long enough to come east for her niece's wedding in Toronto. A friend drove her up here for the day to see us and to get a couple of things from her house.

There wasn't enough time. And she was so fragile. She was determined to keep her cheerfulness in tact. And I didn't want to make her day any more difficult than it was. It was the most awful, bittersweet day. When she left, Ed and I held each other and wept.

This is the third time a very close friend of mine has been in grave health. I suppose it will happen more often as time goes by. Maybe I'll even get used to it. At least, I hope to find a better way of dealing with it.

It wasn't so bad when I was able to bend and dig and plant the garden. I was so tired from that hard work there wasn't time for this agonizing. But now, like I said, we're into the summer thing. The first tube down the river in June wasn't right without Judy's sunny face. All last week, we should have been together at the Gallery and the barbecue, and the second tube. I kept catching myself gazing into space.

While we were on the river, we all tried to concentrate on her, as if we could send her the peace and serenity of the birds songs and the gentle sound of the water on the rocks to comfort her while the needle was sending the dreadful chemicals into her body.

She's so far away. We can call her. We can send cards. But we can't hold her hands. Why is that so frustrating? We feel like we're failing her. And yet it's probably better that we can't see her now. I know what it is. It's the awful thought that we may never see one of the dearest people we know again.

And so we sat with our eyes closed, my other dear friends, my mate and I, while Michael Jones made sounds of wind and thunder and rain come from his soul and through his fingers onto the keyboard. And in my mind's eye, the light summer shower rained on my friend's bones like a healing, soothing ointment. She drifted through the room on the wings of swallows flying.

Michael Jones told the stories of his music and how he came to play the way he does. His music expresses the simple, beautiful joys of life. Those things we forget to look for and listen to in our hurry through each day. He brings us down to earth, into the earth, surrounds us with its magnificence. All the wonder of daisies and butterflies.

Judy has never forgotten these things. It's the reason everyone loves her so much. When I think of Judy, I picture her sitting on the river on a sunny day smiling in wonderment at the dragonfly taking a fine ride on her big toe.

Bottlers should pay own way

GEORGE WILL, the Washington political columnist, quoted a parable a few years ago that I think applies to the current environmental situation:

Three hunters hire a small plane to take them into the northern wilderness to hunt moose. The pilot says, "I'll return in a week, but remember what I said last year: 'This plane can only carry three hunters and one moose.'"

When he returns, he sees the three hunters — and two moose. The hunters say: "Last year we slipped you $100 and you let us load two moose." The pilot says: "Okay, but this year it's going to cost you $200."

The hunters grumble, but pay up and load the two moose on board and the plane lumbers a few feet aloft — then plunges into some trees. The hunters are scattered in the branches and one shouts: "Where are we?" Another answers: "About a hundred yards from where we crashed last year!"

The moral is, of course, that there are some slow learners out there.

Once again, the soft drink bottlers of Ontario have found that they can't meet their quota of returnables, and once again their PR people are saying it's "the will of the people," that we want cans and plastic bottles rather than bothering with reusable bottles anyhow.

As a former public relations executive, I can't help but admire what the Ontario bottlers have done with a few million bucks for blue boxes. (Last year Coke alone did a billion dollars worth of business in our province.)

As someone concerned about the environment, I find their success in selling the government off regulating their waste tough to take. In the U.S. they spend less on recycling, more on paying lobbyists at the federal and state levels.

In Florida, where litter is a real problem, the Miami Herald listed the contributions of the various groups to fight a system of deposits on cans and plastic bottles as well as glass ones. Big bucks.

Bottlers managed to "buy" themselves some time down there: the Natural Resources Committee voted 21-4 that refundable deposits won't come into effect until 1994 — and that's only if a target of 70% of all containers are not recycled by October of 1992. (Ontario's "targets," set by the Liberals, and now apparently conveniently forgotten, were considerably lower).

The good news down there is that they are extracting a penny surcharge on each can, bottle or plastic container if they haven't reached a 50 percent return rate by October of 1992, doubling to two cents each a year later.

But don't count on the bottlers to remember the rules. Here in Ontario, they sold the blue box concept with the idea that the value of the aluminum cans will practically pay the costs of handling them.

Scrap aluminum was worth a lot more then, of course, before the market was flooded. Now it's down to $1,500 a ton — but that's a lot more than the $70 a ton for scrap steel cans — the kind Coca-Cola is switching over to these days.

In spite of the clippings in my files and everyone else's, the head of Coca-Cola is denying that they committed themselves to the use of aluminum cans in 1985 when they were selling the blue box concept to the Liberals.

Besides, they say, the steel industry of Ontario has developed a lightweight can that is more economical for them to buy than aluminum. "The steel industry in Ontario needs encouragement," says Coke's president.

Some people might say that's code for "look at all the union jobs I can save for you in Hamilton and the Soo, Bob Rae."

I don't think it would matter what kind of containers these birds use — if our "environmentally aware" government would stop the farce and start charging a deposit on ALL containers — make bottlers pay people to recycle them instead of bribing the governments — and us local taxpayers — to subsidize their profitable operations.

I'm not sure if it's in the book "All I Need To Know I Learned In Kindergarten," but one of the rules used to be: If you make a mess — clean it up.

Isn't it about time that concept became part of the environmental rules? Will the province ever learn?

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

IF I GET MY HANDS on that groundhog, I'll kill him, I swear," Myrtle said, shaking her hand at the retreating hunched form. Only a minute ago, the pesky thing had been sitting up on its back legs on the big rock out in the middle of the lawn. Myrtle was positive the animal was looking right through the screen door, straight into her face, mocking her.

She had been waging a war with the birds and animals for several years. Every spring she planted her vegetable garden over in a corner of the yard, and every year she lost part of her crop to the wildlife. Myrtle had always been a lover of animals but when it came to protecting her garden, she was a different person entirely.

Maybe it was partly due to the effort she went through just getting the seeds into the ground. The garden site was extremely fertile, as a local farmer brought a fresh load of manure for it every second year. On top of that, or rather under it, flowed a little stream so that even in the hottest of weather, the rich soil remained irrigated. While all of this would seem like the perfect combination, there was one factor that worked against Myrtle achieving optimum crops.

The garden was planted close to the bush. It was the only place she could put a vegetable garden since the rest of the terrain was either driveway or solid rock. Her husband had cut down a few trees to let in the sun, but neither of them wanted to cut down any more. So as a result, her little patch of nourishment did not get as much sunshine as it really should. Luckily for her the other factors partly compensated for this lack.

Every spring Myrtle would be out in the moist soil, forming her rows and hills of seeds, besieged by hordes of mosquitoes and blackflies. The combination of bush behind the garden and a stream close by meant that bugs were just about ready to carry the poor sower away. Yet every year she put up with them, the grimy perspiration running down her face, for every time she swatted a bug she'd spread freshly turned earth over her face and arms.

And despite the cursing and flailing of hands, she'd end up with neat little lines and mounds that would eventually yield lettuce, radishes, beans, beets, carrots, onions, cucumbers, and potatoes. At the very front of the garden, where there was the most sun, she planted her favourite — tomato plants. All of this was guarded by a chicken wire fence stapled to wooden stakes she hammered into the ground. It was the widest chicken wire she could find in the hardware store and being a short woman, she was unable to climb over it without knocking or bending it. So she had concocted a special door with wire, a misshapen piece of plywood and a bent nail. It worked just fine. The kids all knew the consequences of not closing this door to the garden were too horrible to contemplate.

But there was more. In the middle of the garden was a scarecrow made of a nearly bald old broom. A thick tree branch was lashed partway down the of wilderness in Ontario and other provinces, the U.S.A., and European countries from Sweden to Hungary. In all that time I have seen many unique and special wilderness treasures. Haliburton Forest is one of them.

It is an environmentally, ecologically, and climatically significant area. Its size allows for as natural as possible a diversity of flora and fauna in a self-regulating system. Smaller, isolated tracts of land cannot do this. It seems the company is taking a leading, pro-active role in environmental issues.

I am not a forestry expert but I do know forests intimately. Haliburton Forest has the wisest forestry practices and the finest forests I have encountered in this country. In a land where the primitive "clear-cut" flourishes, Haliburton Forest has adopted conservative European attitudes and practices. They produce a very high quality forest that can be harvested without deterioration.

Another reason I appreciate Haliburton Forest is because it is in private hands. While there is a role for government in society, even governments recognize that they do some things well and other things rather poorly. The maintenance of this wilderness treasure isn't costing taxpayers in Haliburton County a single penny. Indeed, it pays its share (some say much more than a fair share) of the tax load, just like you and I do.

No person, government body or private company conducts his life in perfect harmony with his neighbours or nature. Nobody! Yet if I had to choose between a huge tract of unique wilderness supporting a variety of low impact recreational and commercial activities, as I believe Haliburton Forest is, or the cut-throat development-at-any-cost ethic that is so pervasive in this society, I would take a Haliburton Forest approach every time.

Somehow, Haliburton Forest owners need to make enough money to pay their taxes, themselves and their employees. You and I do too. If keeping this property intact takes a forest harvested in the best way possible, or some noisy but otherwise low impact snowmobiles, or some controlled hunt camps (boy do I dislike admitting that), or even 300 unserviced campsites spread among 20 lakes, then I think it's an ideal, maybe-as-perfect-as-we-can-get model.

The options regarding what to do with a 50,000 acre wilderness are few. Clearcut the forest and build wall to wall cottages for quick, maximum profit OR design a system of sustainable, environmentally sound yet economically viable commercial ventures.

There is no "no development" option, unless we are to all live in, and vacation in, government-owned and built apartment complexes in large southern cities. Even if all the government sponsored parks were "protected" today, it would still total less than 4 percent of Canada's land mass (and don't governments allow camping, canoe tripping, and logging on its lands too). Without some form of "private stewardship", for which I think Haliburton Forest is a fine model, we sooner than we think won't have any quality wilderness left.

AS A READER of various journals, one of my favorites is the weekly newspaper, The Valley Reporter, from Waitsfield, Vermont. The Waitsfield/Warren area mirrors in population, economy and size Haliburton County and like us it is tourism driven. What is interesting is not so much the similarity of issues, such as the economy and environment, but rather the differences in how they resolve them.

Historically Vermont is the hot bed of participatory town hall democracy, lifted it seems right out of the history books from the ancient Greek City States. Recently a debate heated up over a school budget increase of $47,000 over the previous year, and resulted in a town meeting that overrode that decision. The school board asked for another town meeting to reconsider and the vote went the same way: no increase in spending and no tax increase. Notwithstanding the issues, what was fascinating was the force and passion of the demands of the town people, who were heard and their views respected. The final decision on major issues rested with them and not with their elected representatives.

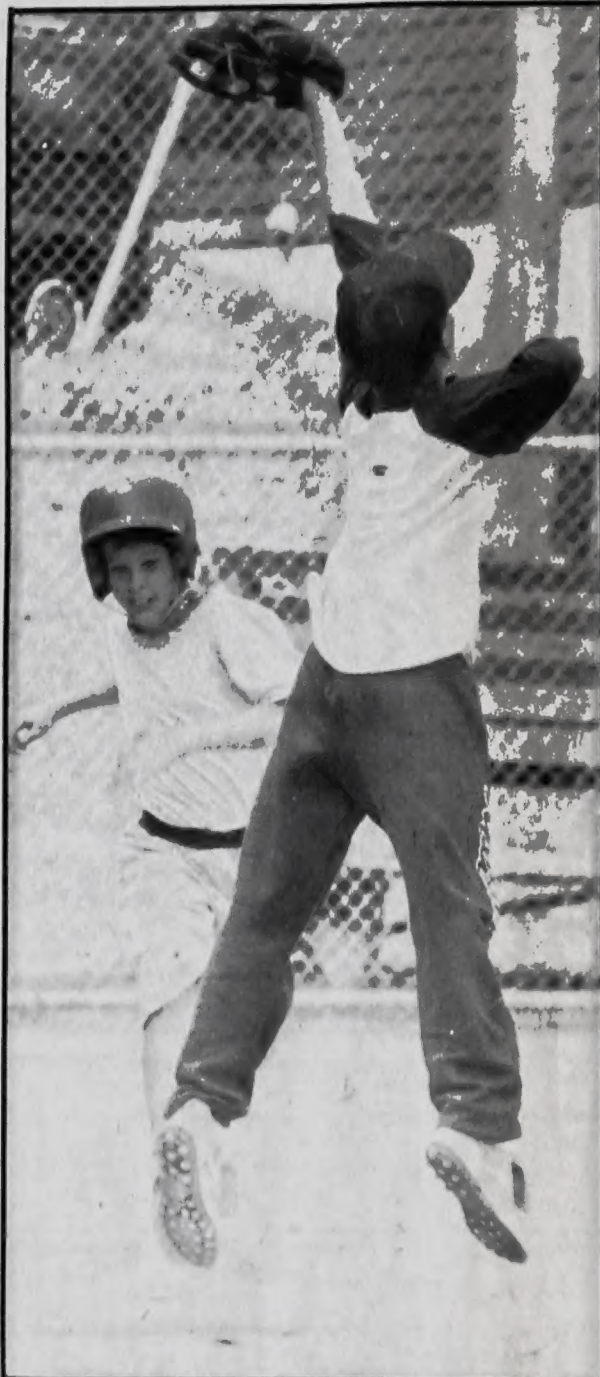

Compare that with a few recent events in our com-

ON THE BAT: Indian Mike Craigen lines up a shot, above, while a Gravenhurst player heads for home, right, at Saturday morning's game in Haliburton.

Indians hold down the homestead in tourney

by BRIAN MULHOLLAND

The Haliburton Indians began their mini homestand Saturday morning, hosting Gravenhurst at the town diamond.

Shane Flood got the start for the Indians, getting nicked for three runs in the top of the first. The homestead left two base runners stranded in their half, unable to cut into the opposition's lead. After struggling somewhat in the first inning, Flood put the pieces together to retire the Gravenhurst side in order in his second inning of work.

The Haliburton Indians got the lead off batter on base as Mike Craigen drew a walk, but he was erased at second on a fielders choice. The next two batters went down, leaving Gravenhurst ahead three to nothing after two complete.

Greg Forgrave relieved Flood on the mound, quickly running into trouble with that elusive strike zone. Gravenhurst, taking advantage of Forgrave's wildness scored five times, seizing an eight run lead. The Indians looked ready to threaten in the bottom half of the inning as they loaded the bases on consecutive singles from Forgrave and Mulholland and a walk to Morissette, but could only squeeze one run in.

In the fourth, the opposition padded their lead scoring three times to take a convincing 11-1 advantage. However, the Indians sent nine men to the plate against Gravenhurst's ace, scoring four times as Johnston, Glendinning, Neville and Mulholland came around to score. After four complete the score stood at Gravenhurst 11 Indians 5.

Mike Morissette pitched the fifth and final inning, setting the opposition down with the aid of some solid team defence. The Indians were unable to generate any offence in their final at bat — leaving the final score Gravenhurst 11 Indians 5.

Game two of the homestand brought Huntsville to the Dysart town diamond. This game would prove to be one of the more entertaining regular schedule games this far into the Indian season. Fans witnessed stellar defence, strong pitching and some lively hitting.

Lucky fans witnessed how spirited the contest was Once again Shane Flood got the nod for the Indians — watching as his teammates put together three consecutive defensive gems to set the Huntsville top three batters down. Defensive plays saw Jason Henry handle a hard hit groundball at third, throwing the runner out by a step, John McMahon playing centerfield catch a rocket hit out to left center field and finally Cam Neville starting at shortstop, throw the runner out at first. The Indians' Mike Morissette drew a two out walk in the first but was left stranded as the next Indian batter grounded out.

The Indians put a blanket over the opposition in the second inning, enjoying a one two three inning. Likewise for Huntsville the homestead went just as quickly in their half. After two complete there was no score.

Mike Morissette relieved Flood in the top of the third inning, showing good velocity but some control problems as he issued three bases on balls while gathering a couple of strikeouts. After the dust settled the opposition managed to score twice, taking a two run lead. Strong pitching retired Glendinning, McMahon and Dart in the bottom half of the inning.

Back to the top of their batting order, the big bats from the visitors managed to score three times, building a five to nothing lead. The Indians in their fourth at bat managed to get one run closer as Forgrave came around to score.

Getting this first inning of relief work, Mike Craigen put together an impressive outing — notching one strikeout and holding the opposition to one run. The fifth inning proved to be quiet for the homestead unable to generate any offence.

Huntsville went to work in the sixth, scoring three times to build a convincing nine to one lead. The Indians once again were unable to solve Huntsville's Jack Bevington — solid in relief — as they went down one two three.

In the final inning, Shane Flood came on to pitch his third inning, notching two more K's but seeing Huntsville peck away for two more runs. Heading off in the homestead's seventh Brian Mulholland laced a single into left field to rally his teammates. Morissette went down swinging, leaving Mulholland at second base — having taken second on the strikeout. Shane Flood continued the rally with a single, putting runners on the corners. This brought Jason Henry to the plate. He cashed in both runs with a single into leftfield but this would be all the scoring the Indians would do, as they dropped an 11 to 3 decision.

As wide a margin of victory as this would appear, fans witnessing the game realized how spirited this contest really was. The Indians continue to show game by game improvement.

Next action will be the Indians Invitational Tournament played at the Minden Ball Diamonds with the local boys opening the tourney against Gravenhurst at 9:00 a.m. Saturday July 13.

Jug City stomps Muskoka 6-1

by JIM MILNE

West Side Jug City defeated Muskoka Inter 6-1 in Muskoka District soccer play last Sunday, July 7.

The City team scored three quick goals in the first 10 minutes and coasted to victory against an older Muskoka team. The City keeper, Brian Moore, was disappointed by the only goal Muskoka scored because he hopes to retain his record, won last year, for the best goals against average. Currently he has a fine record of six goals against in seven games. He credits the team's defensive formation with four fullbacks and particularly the regular fullbacks Eoin Ross, Chris Holliday-Rhodes and Kevin Sicard.

As noted, the team lines up in a defensive formation but the three-man attacking unit has scored an impressive 27 goals in eight games. There are some weak tams in the league, such as Muskoka Inter, but the team doesn't run up the score against them. In the second half against Muskoka the team turned itself inside out. The keeper stayed put but the forwards came back to defend and the fullbacks lined up at centre. City scored once in the second half.

The key to Jug City's offensive success is the speed of their forwards Jan Haedicke with seven goals, Cecil Smith with five and

Pianist draws many into his world of beauty

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

MICHAEL JONES took his audience down several different paths on Thursday night, but ultimately the destination was always the same — a quiet, peaceful place inside each person where for two hours at least, all was right with the world.

Yet this doesn't mean the pianist offered a fare of mindless, inconsequential tinkering on the piano keys, thoughtlessly wandering wherever the spirit led him. His music, for all its spontaneity, was far more structured than that, and there always seemed to be something new around the next corner. It was different than classical music because it spoke in the language of the modern mind, but it didn't lack depth and artistry.

Perhaps the music at first seems simple because the listener's mind tends to get lost in the music, sometimes tuning out the individual notes and concentrating on the overall flow of the song. Suddenly, as the music creates a kinder, gentler world, George Bush's "thousand points of light" make a lot more sense — it's the light bursting over the lake in early morning, inspiring Jones to write and play "Sunrise", or the thousand drops of rain which precede "After the Rain." A thousand notes on the keys, a thousand different ways to describe nature's beauty and inherent hope.

Nature is always present in Jones's music, sometimes more than the music itself. Whether the piano is used to conjure up images of early morning mist, walks through a meadow or floating down a bubbling brook, Jones, and therefore his audience, always seem to be standing on the water's shore or by the forest's edge. It's hard to imagine office towers and streetcars in Jones's music.

But getting people to relax is not an easy task. People were quiet in the auditorium because they were listening to the music and their own thoughts. Each of Jones's songs is joyful, full of life and vitality, if not vim and vigour. If Jones was writing the soundtrack of a movie, there couldn't help but be a happy ending. And the music compelled you to respond in kind.

Many of his songs, however, didn't end; they just went softly, slowly into nowhere, although you were always left feeling confident about their fate.

Jones was every bit the entertainer as the performer, further adding to the audience's enjoyment of his offerings. Before each song, he would share a little story, just as he does with his latest recording, Michael's Music.

"I like to just see how the music comes — even

I don't recognize it half the time," he said after his introductory "Mexican Memories". Likewise, "if you fall asleep, go ahead. Just let the images come and see what happens." (At one point, one song melded into the next because "People were looking drowsy so I thought I'd play on and not disturb you.")

The Haliburton Legion, although a bit cold both literally and figuratively, was not one of Jones's most unconventional concert venues. Last year he played at the Lebanon Correctional Institute in Ohio, first signing a form which said "I absolve the State of Ohio of any responsibility. . ."

At another concert, he pushed his piano from room to room, going where the people gathered for a convention went. He gave a rather impromptu concert once from the back of a pick-up truck: He had just bought an old church pump organ and was transporting it back to his Ottawa Valley cottage. "Why don't I sit in the back and play the organ?" he asked his friends. As they drove through the quiet countryside, "I don't know if the people knew where this organ music was coming from but I suspect a few of them found their way to church the next Sunday, some for the first time in a very, very long time."

Chance encounters seem to have played an important role in Jones's development as a professional musician. With a background in classical music, as a burgeoning pianist he was bumped face to face with the real world and often found himself playing the Golden Oldies in bar lounges. "I played Moon River a lot," he said, sometimes mixing in his own music as the patrons wandered off to bed. Until one day a somewhat inebriated man came up to him to say "Stop wasting your time — a thousand people can play Moon River. Who's going to play your kind of music?" Then he veered off back into the bar and I never saw him again. I never played Moon River again."

A short time later — 10 years ago this month — Jones was recording "Michael's Music", a forerunner to the far more comprehensive collection by the same name sold today.

Developing his own style wasn't easy at first. Schooled in Debussy and Chopin, he always fought the urge to interpret the music and take it places which weren't written on the sheet. For years after university he didn't play at all, devoting his energies to his work in psychology and consulting. "I thought music was something you did at school before you got on with the real world."

While the audience was deservedly grateful Jones has developed his own style, there were times you wished he'd take those isolated snippets of jazz and classical music and explore them further. Having found his unique voice, it would be interesting to have that voice singing in the other styles of music, still making something distinctively "Jonesian."

By the end of the concert there was only contentment, however — and a few more converts.

All proceeds from the concert were donated to the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts, which sponsored the evening.

'I like to see how the music comes — even I don't recognize it half the time,' says Michael Jones, whose benefit concert showed his music doesn't lack depth and artistry

Studies back fish stocking changes

Recent biological studies by the Ministry of Natural Resources have revealed poor survival of stocked lake trout in several lakes. In contrast, natural reproduction contributed significantly more lake trout to the fishery. Of the 50 lakes studied it has been recommended that stocking of lake trout be discontinued in 20 lakes.

Over the past several years, Ministry staff have used various means to assess and sample fish in area lakes. Fish caught were weighed, measured, a scale sample taken and then released. The scales were used to age fish and calculate growth rates.

following lakes commencing in 1992: Billings, Glamorgan; Bob, Anson; Boshkung, Stanhope; Cat-chacoma, Cavendish; Esson, Mpm-mouth; Gold, Cavendish; Halibur-ton, Harburn; Halls, Stanhope; Kashagawigamog, Dysart/Minden; Kennisis, Havelock; Kushog, Stanhope; Miskwabi, Dudley; Mississauga, Cavendish; Moose, Guilford/Harburn; Mountain, Minden; Picard, Cavendish; Salmon, Cavendish; Sheldon, Luterworth; Soyers, Minden; and Two Island, Dudley.

monster hunter. "The monsters appear to have found the entrances and have been moving from lake to lake. The latest sighting of the monsters was at Green Lake in West Guilford late on Saturday night."

The Hairy Haliburton Highland Hound also eluded the Guelph monster hunter. "I am grateful to all those people who have assisted me, especially those who sent details to The Echo. I wore heavy boots when hunting the Hound in case the Ochnoo was still scavenging for toenails."

At the Highland Games a group of children gave storyteller Batt renditions of their versions of the Hounds howl. Batt said "I had no idea the Hound sounded so blood curdling. Greg's howl was so realistic when he howled into the main speaker system that some of the people near the woods got up and moved." Greg was voted the best Howler and was awarded an extra key chain from the Cutty Sark sponsors.

If the Hound is still at large next year John Batt hopes to visit schools in the area to get more information and to hear more howls.

Of primary importance were the numbers of stocked fish, their growth rates, the ratio of stocked to natural fish, and the amount of habitat available to lake trout. For example, a lake with few stocked fish, a high percentage of natural fish, and abundant well oxygenated cold water habitat was recommended for removal from the stocking list. Lakes in this category will be managed to promote self-reproducing populations of native trout.

Stocking of lake trout may be discontinued in order to promote the growth of native populations or to permit stocking of other species such as splake or rainbow trout.

Stocking is scheduled to be reduced or discontinued in the suggested by the province.

To achieve these initiatives, in the second stage the waste management plan will come up with alternative waste systems which will meet with criteria developed by the plan's Steering Committee and the public.

But before deciding on what criteria will be used, the following waste principles will be taken into consideration: waste management facilities shall be built to minimize the impacts on the environment and public health; all generators of waste must recognize their responsibilities in waste management; waste generated in the study area will preferably be managed in the study area; waste recycling, reduction and reuse programs must be integrated in the Master Plan; municipalities shall share the responsibility for the management of the Plan; and the plan will be designed to be updated and amended in the future.

Accompanying the main report is a 20-page report outlining the present condition and possible solutions on recycling in Haliburton County. After analyzing several methods, it recommends the county adopt a system with one-box separation without door-to-door collection and with backyard composting.

Residents would separate recycleables into one container which they take to a landfill site. At the depot, the items are separated into compartments and are picked up by a contractor to be delivered to a local facility. Three municipalities are already involved in a similar program.

Both reports are available for public inspection at any of the municipal offices in the county. And this Saturday, an outdoor public waste management meeting is being held at Head Lake Park in Haliburton, beginning at 10 a.m. Both Munt and Paul Frigon, the planning consultant who developed the reports, will be on hand to answer questions.

Tim Davies with three. City also has midfielders with good ball handling skills, Hans Walter with seven goals, Ivor Thompson with two and Marc Legere. Chris Carl, the team captain, ties the defensive and offensive units together.

On Sunday July 14, Jug City travels to Orillia to play the only opponent to defeat them this year. In a non-league game for the Muskoka Cup on June 9, Jug City lost 2-1 but in league standings Haliburton is second with 11 points and Orillia is tied for sixth place with 5 points both in 6 games in a 9 team league.

Transports of delight

*There's something in a flying horse,
There's something in a huge balloon;
But through the clouds I'll never float
Until I have a little Boat, Shaped like the crescent moon.*

DREAMS ARE AFLOAT in a steel shed on Industrial Park Road where the Haliburton School of Fine Arts is holding a two-week course on boatbuilding.

Eight students are now into their second week with teacher Jeremy Masterson, a boat refinisher and builder by trade who travels to Haliburton from Bracebridge each day.

"It's great," says Masterson. "I've come to Haliburton to talk boats with a bunch of enthusiastic people."

And boats they will build. In this case, the students will pair up to create four flat-bottomed skiffs (or rowboats). This boat was chosen because it has many traditional characteristics of many larger boats which can be made from the same material.

"We debated whether or not to make it a one-week quickie course, but if we're teaching how to build a boat, we should teach the proper techniques. The techniques they're learning should apply to any wood boat, whether it's 30 or 5 feet long," says Masterson.

A simple skiff can be built with plywood and cost next to nothing, but Masterson believes in using the best materials possible to create a durable, rewarding product: white oak, Honduran mahogany, western red cedar, copper rivets and stainless steel screws.

Although students are learning the skills necessary for boatbuilding, Masterson says they are just concentrating on this particular boat which has planking on the bottom, lap strake sides and a one-piece rabbeted (grooved) stem.

The best way to describe it to someone who is not familiar with all the terminology is to say it resembles a sturdy, four passenger rowboat.

Masterson learned to distinguish between a good rowboat and a bad rowboat when he was only ten years old and his parents managed a yacht in Cape Cod.

After deciding to go for a row one day, and with half a dozen boats to choose from on the shore, he chose the one that looked the easiest to row — a fibreglass boat.

He tried several others, none of which gave him the control or the smoothness he was looking for. It was the biggest, oldest wood boat, one which had likely been in someone's family for years, which turned out to be the easiest of all to row.

But educating people on the benefits of wooden boats is difficult work, says Masterson. Wooden boats have the reputation of rotting and requiring lots of repairs, but by giving courses like this one in Haliburton, Masterson hopes to dispell these myths.

If you want to keep a wooden boat looking showroom fresh, it is no different from a fibreglass boat, he says. Just keep it clean, keep the sun off ritories are working as a team to build a flat-bottomed skiff. The two-week course in boatbuilding was offered through the Haliburton School of Fine Arts.

it with covers or in the boathouse, and repair any damages right away.

The idea of building their own boat was one of the things that brought John Jamieson and Craig d'Entremont from their homes in the Northwest Territories, 5000 kilometres from Haliburton.

"We're leading the course in mistakes," says Jamieson with a laugh. Being a teacher, this is the third summer he has taken courses at Sir Sandford Fleming's School of Fine Arts in Haliburton, which he calls "a mecca for people from the Arctic".

"What I like about this place is that there's no horsing around. You get a lot of information fast, and it's not lecture format, it's hands-on learning."

"For us we're so isolated, we can't take courses like this, there's just no infrastructure to support the arts," says d'Entremont, who has taken a short vacation from his job with the Science Institute in Yellowknife.

"There's enough time to do a good job and you can get the information and guidance you need — and you know you'll have a boat built in the end!"

In the fifth day of the course, deeply immersed in building the stern of the boat, both men appear a little more frustrated than on the third day when they were still planing the wood and completing a form to build the boat over.

But they're still smiling and taking their time, and there is a hint of pride in their expressions when they step back from only a shell-of-boat, hammer, nails and degree rulers in hand.

The completed boats will be sold for approximately $4,500 each and there will be a lottery if more than four of the students wish to buy their works of art.

Canadians need to open eyes

CHAMBER SHAWN HAGERMAN

community. Last week our MPP Dennis Drainville proudly announced that the province (us) will spend $750,000 on a new school in Minden, along with a mention, of course, that the local taxpayers can pick up the balance of the project with an estimated cost of up to $2.5 million. Undoubtedly we need a school in Minden but we also need a thorough discussion of its costs and how much we can afford to spend. Nary a word has been raised so far as to whether we could afford to raise such a sum in these economic times.

I think it is time as Canadians we stopped whining about our politicians all the time and what they are doing to us. A deficit is merely the difference between what a Government spends and what it has the courage to collect. The politicians are only trying to keep us happy with the services we keep clamoring to have.

The recent history of politics in our area is one of apathy, especially on a municipal level. Did you consider running? Did you actively support a candidate or research issues and bring them to the all candidate meeting? The answer is probably no. The proof is in the last civic election. In our County government, the 10 top positions for reeve went by acclamation. Also of the nine deputy Reeves, five were acclaimed. These people not only sit on their local councils, but serve on County Council as well. This is not meant as criticism of those acclaimed, rather I think a certain praise is due them. In each one of those municipalities they were the only ones who had the courage, patience and energy to give to public service. Although as a Chamber director and taxpayer I have felt frustration at decisions they have made, I have always held the greatest respect for their integrity. They are the ones who have had to make difficult decisions for what they perceive to be the best interests of their municipality and their county. It is they, especially on a county level, who have given hours every week at countless evening meetings, held difficult negotiations, served on numerous committees, all in an effort to serve the public good and with usually little or no thanks. The remuneration for their municipal service does not reflect the hours expended or the costs to their businesses or families.

If year after year politicians are simply acclaimed into office, then issues are never discussed, direction is never sought or given and the electorate is abdicating its responsibility by simply placing all its trust in the judgement of those who stand unopposed. If there is anyone to blame for the recent 35 percent increase in county spending then it is ourselves, the taxpayers. Where was the probing of candidates at the last election to find out where they stood on the Chamber, education, waste management, county and municipal planning, roads, welfare and ultimately taxation? It is those issues then and now that drive our representatives to make choices and decisions on how and where the money gets spent. They are doing the best they can based on their perception of our communities' needs and wishes.

It seems the traditional Canadian way in politics is don't get involved, don't research issues, don't actively work to support a candidate, don't ask embarrassing questions at all-candidates nights, just elect, or better yet, acclaim your politicians and then complain bitterly about their decisions. This seems to apply whether it be on a municipal, provincial or federal level and carries on until the next election when the process is repeated again. I wonder, out of this latest budget uproar at county level, what percentage of the taxpayers have actually called or written to their representative to express their views? I would be surprised if it was anything but a very small percentage. There is an old saying at camp that if you don't like the cooking, then you'd better start learning how to cook.

Animal raiders feast on garden broom handle to form outstretched arms and the whole thing dressed in a discarded sun hat and one of her husband's old painting shirts. From the scarecrow and suspended from string throughout the garden were aluminum pie plates. These were to make a terrifying racket when touched by wind or any other movement, a racket that would scare off all birds or four-legged marauders.

Her efforts were not entirely successful. Just as the lettuce started to reach a nice size, or the bean plants straightened up and form a few tender new leaves, Myrtle would come out one morning on inspection and let out a yell that could be heard halfway across the bay. An animal had got into her garden. First she'd scout the perimeter of her patch, to see if there were any signs of entry.

Sometimes a telltale gap in the chicken wire, a loose stake, even a hole where a rabbit had dug down under the fence: these she would fix immediately. She'd use the shovel to build up more earth on the outside of the fence and where a hole had been dug, she place the biggest rock she could find. And all the while she'd be hollering at the animals as though they were just out of range, watching her with big eyes from the shadows of the bush behind.

Her work usually kept the rabbits out and the raccoons in particular seemed discouraged by the rattling aluminum plates. Only one year did a deer wander out into the open and over to Myrtle's pride and joy. When she looked out and saw it trampling through everything, she was torn between just standing and watching it and running outside with a club. By the time she had decided to run outside, the deer had high-tailed it off anyway.

But groundhogs were the worse. They would dig as deep as necessary to get to Myrtle's vegetables. Noise didn't seem to bother them. In fact as the summer progressed they would become bolder, scurrying out of the garden only seconds before Myrtle arrived to weed. Oh, then she'd be mad! She'd throw stones at them and stomp her feet, all the while afraid to look at what damage they had inflicted that day.

Why on earth, you might ask, would this woman continue to plant a vegetable garden every year, only to provide food for the animals? Well, some years were much worse than others when it came to pirating pests. These good years helped her over the bad ones to some extent. Besides, despite all the ranting and raving, Myrtle always ended up with some produce from her garden. And it was so deliciously better than anything from the store, that she felt it was worth the aggravation. And finally, Myrtle loved gardening. Period. Despite her cursing and animals and the mosquitoes, she loved nothing better than to dig her hands into the beautifully rich soil, and nurture something up into the sunshine. If she and her family got to eat it in the end, well then that was a bonus.

BECAUSE THE PAST is so alive within him, Wilfred Mason will probably never grow old. Eighty-two, his voice is still filled with reverence, awe and unquestioning love when he talks about his grandfather and father. If wishing could make it so, they would once again be by his side, guiding him, teaching him, working with him and the land to provide for the family.

It's as if the strength of his memories makes it possible for him to have a perpetual boyhood, re-living again and again those halcyon days of youth spent under the wing of two very honest, upright and hard-working farming pioneers.

But Mr. Mason is not a Peter Pan who's afraid to grow old. Instead, as the years pass and he wears the mantle of his ancestors with his head held high, one of his main sources of pride is that from under the shadow of several towering individuals, he grew into a man they could all be proud of.

"This has been my home and I've loved it," Mr. Mason says, sitting in the dining room of his Boshkung Lake farm, the wind rustling through the fields and providing welcome respite on a hot summer's day. Except for the small television in the corner and a few other intrusions of modern life, nothing much has changed since his father was born in this same house, the house his father had built.

"We've had our sad times but our joyful times as well. We tried to play fair and living honestly. We had nothing to regret."

Farming tends to keep a man honest, partly because in the Highlands at least it gives him little money to be foolish with. There's more to it than that, however. Mason is one of the old names in Stanhope Township, which is celebrating its 125th anniversary this summer, and it's a name every bearer will do nothing to impugn.

To do that would have Thomas Mason turning in his grave — or better yet, sitting up to shake his cane at the miserable offender. "The patriarch of Boshkung" did not sail the seas seeking adventure, escape death countless times, and master the tribulations of farm life just to have some upstart do something rash.

Wilfred Mason's grandfather was born in England in 1829, the son of a Warwick shepherd. As Nila Reynolds explains in In Quest of Yesterday, "When Thomas Mason was 21, the pastoral charms of Snitterfield paled; he sailed for Cape Town South Africa, arriving just in time for the Kaffir Wars which flared in 1850. Mason gave up a road construction job to bear arms for his Queen as part of a motley force, 1,500 miles strong who travelled a thousand miles upriver to Kaffaria.

"The nature of the battleground, where each bush and hillock might conceal a sniper preying on the marching columns, almost cost Mason his life — he and a single companion were the only survivors of an ambush."

From South Africa, Mason sailed to Australia to strike for gold and once again almost lost his life. He got title to a claim 24 feet square and sunk a 150' shaft to begin digging. "An underground river welled up with such force that his mining equipment swept away and he was barely hauled up in time. Not fancying an unmarked grave in the wilderness, Mason took the gold he had accumulated in a year and a half of digging and set out for Snitterfield through the gauntlet of bush-rangers, more deadly than Krelli's Kaffirs, now preying on outgoing miners."

Back at home waiting for him was Matilda Hitchcox. "She was just hungry for him and they got

'The gardens were beautiful, just like a park,' thanks to the tireless efforts of Thomas Mason, at right, and his granddaughter Myra, who was responsible for the above creation in front of the Boshkung homestead married right after he got back," explains Wilfred Mason, who is grateful that a Boshkung cottager, Walter Kirkconnell, recorded much of Thomas Mason's history, which Mrs. Reynolds used as background. "Grampa told him stories we passed by as nothing. If it hadn't been for Walter, we wouldn't have this history."

Danger and tragedy did not elude Thomas Mason when he convinced his bride to immigrate with him to Paris, Ontario. Shortly after their arrival, Mrs. Mason, never a robust woman, took sick and died.

To escape painful thoughts, Thomas Mason journeyed to Peterborough County. "A chance meeting with the surveyor, Mr. C.R. Stewart, who had just finished Stanhope's crown survey, in the autumn of 1860 directed Thomas Mason's course to Big Boshkung by the recently constructed railway to Lindsay. There he booked passage on the Kawartha waters' first steamer, 'Woodman', which took him to Bobcaygeon. Here he encountered Captain William Welch and Caleb Davis, formerly one of Queen Victoria's own guards; both were looking for land. Together they proceeded along the Bobcaygeon Road which was in the process of construction.

"Guided by Stewart's instructions, the three arrived at the extreme northwest shore of Big Boshkung, which the surveyor had enthusiastically recommended as suitable for homesteading since it was accessible by water and not too distant from the Bobcaygeon and Peterson Roads. Mason chose 100 acres on Lot 9, Concession 5."

Here he build a log cabin with split basswood and the next year, added a sturdy barn. "The fall wheat, scattered by hand, was covered by dragging a tree top over the rich earth."

In those days, when Thomas Mason was describing his new home, he'd call it Boskung. "Then someone stuck an h in there that never belonged," says Wilfred Mason.

It didn't take long for Thomas Mason to set his sights on a young local widow, Mrs. Amey Ezelda Harrison, who had two young boys. They married and as a gift to his wife, Mr. Mason travelled to Fenelon Falls and picked up a heavy wooden sideboard, which he brought north by punt,

Please turn to page 16

'This has been my home and I've loved it,' says Wilfred Mason, here with his wife June, of the Boshkung farmhouse his grandfather Thomas Mason, 'the patriarch of Stanhope', built in 1860 using wood he felled himself somehow getting it over the 18 portages along the 63-mile water route. The sideboard deepens the sense of history in the Masons' house today.

Wherever Thomas Mason lived, danger was always close at hand. At Boshkung, it was the natural kind. While chopping a tree, his scaffolding broke and the tree rolled on top of him, crushing three ribs, breaking his leg and slitting open his throat. One of the curios Wilfred Mason has about his grandfather is a clipping of "It Happened in Canada" which reads: "Mrs. James Hewitt, an early pioneer of the Haliburton region of Ontario, told that a neighbour, Thos. Mason, had been critically injured with his throat ripped open by a branch of tree he had felled. She rushed to his aid, taking her sewing basket with her. After pushing in Mason's protruding windpipe, Mrs. Hewitt took a common needle and thread and sewed up his throat."

Pictures of Thomas Mason always show him with a long flowing beard. That's to hide the scar on his neck, his grandson says. Even though his neck healed well, his injured leg became a few inches shorter than the other, and that's why there's also usually a cane in the photos.

Rural life held its dangers for his family as well. The Masons had three sons, George, John and Alfred (Wilfred's father). One day, two-year-old Georgie wanted to help his papa on the farm, but Thomas thought it would be too dangerous, so he told the young boy to go with his mother and neighbour for a boat ride. Tragically, the boat got caught in the trough of the waves and tipped over. "Grandma held little Georgie in her arms, she thought they'd both be drowned," says Wilfred.

Neighbours rushed down to the lake and pulled them out of the water. In his travels, Thomas had learned artificial resuscitation and "he worked on (his wife) from 11 in the morning till three in the afternoon but there was no one to work on the boy. The only thing that kept Grampa going was he could see the mist of Grandma's breath on the mirror. Grampa felt the whole blow because he was the one who told my mother to take Georgie with her. I don't think he ever forgave himself."

Little Georgie was buried in the family plot at the bottom of the farm's hill, now surrounded by cedar trees, still evoking a family's love and painful separation.

Thomas Mason loved children, and he showed it by making them follow the rules. "He was a wonderful babysitter," says his grandson, who lived with him till the day Thomas died. "We were under very strict rules. We had one daring young cousin who never went to bed until a certain hour. When his mother came home, she asked 'Where's David?' 'Why he's in bed,' Grampa replied and my aunt looked aghast. You see, David had said to Grampa 'I'm not going to bed' and Grampa cracked his cane on the floor and David went to bed."

"Grampa wasn't a fearful person. He was a very erect person, like a soldier, but he had been crippled. I wouldn't say he was soft. He was strict and businesslike but he was kind and he'd see that everyone towed the line. He just lived that sort of life as an example. He'd look at me and say 'I want you to watch and see how I do this.' He'd shame a younger person. He drove a horse until he was 90. Father got a quiet mare for him so he could visit friends."

"Grampa had three gardens and he'd get up at the break of day to tend them. When it got hot,

'Neighbours say we got along better than brothers,' Wilfred Mason says of Elvin Johnson, together above. At right, a few years later they are joined by Wilfred's sister Myra he'd sit out on the veranda and smoke his pipe and read his paper. When it cooled off, he'd be back at it again. The gardens were beautiful, just like a park.

"He was only sick one week in his life. Dr. Frain in Minden was our doctor and we got him to come out to see Grampa. He said 'Granddad, all that's wrong with you is your heart's tired of beating all these years.' Grampa was almost 104 when he died December 14, 1932. I had the feeling he'd live forever. I loved him dearly."

Thomas's youngest son was Alfred. "He was a pretty wonderful man," says his son Wilfred. "I almost died of a heart attack when he was gone — a terrible shock."

"He was a very loving, kind man. I followed him pretty closely. As far as I was concerned, he was still the manager of the farm. I always came to him for final settlement. He had really good ideas. 'I have one set of tools,' he told us. 'You boys know where they are, you use them and you put them back where they belong.' He also told us 'If you can't pay, don't go. You always pay your way.' He was a Christian and he did his business accordingly. He didn't believe in debt — never owe a man anything."

Alfred married Sarah Davis, whose family was from Wales. "I loved her as much as a son could. She'd sit up all night with me if I was sick and never whimper. She was fairly plump but she was tall and broad and graceful."

"We went to the little Anglican church, St. Stephen's. That was the horse and buggy days and we had to be able to return in time for the noon meal. Rev. Stringer had many a lunch here with us. He was Irish and had looked after slum children. He'd come and teach religious instruction. When I was little, he'd pick me up and put me on his shoulders and take me up to the school so I could enjoy the program too. Faith — if people were true Christians and loved the Lord, faith was the first place in the family."

Down the road lived the Johnson family, and like many families in the Depression, trusting they could rely on neighbours to help them through hard times. When Mary Johnson died, her husband Walter couldn't take care of the children himself. One of the children, four-year-old Elvin, came to live with the Masons. "He was three years younger than me but mother thought he'd be good company for me. They wanted to adopt him but Walter didn't want his children adopted out."

NEW! Sting-x-tractor

INSECT VENOM EXTRACTOR

"Don't Go North Without It!"

Instant Sting Relief from:
Bee • Wasp • Hornet • Flea • Mosquito • Spider • Scorpion

The Insect Venom Extractor is a one-hand operated vacuum pump that painlessly eliminates the poison from insect bites or stings. This suction action removes the cause of pain and provides instant relief. Extracting the venom (before it spreads through the body) reduces and, in most cases, eliminates the hazard and itching of untreated insect stings.

Clinically Proven Results
94% of the subjects in controlled clinical tests had no reaction or only a minor one from the sting of a wasp when they used the Sting-x-tractor as directed. Extraction of the venom is far superior to old methods of treating stings with swabs or ointments. Sting-x-tractor may be helpful in evacuating puncture wounds from needles or other sharp objects purging the injury and avoiding infection or contamination.

Sting-x-tractor Benefits:
• Instant sting relief • Easy to use, reusable • Base can be turned for fingers • Painless • 775 mb of vacuum • Handle end removes stingers • Evacuates puncture wound • Fits first aid kits • Clinically tested.

PEOPLE

Greener pastures rarely beckon

Neighbours used to say we got along better than brothers."

Together they made their own fun, swimming and canoeing in the summer — the lakes were the most popular transportation routes — fishing on the lake in winter, or tobogganing down the big hill. "We went down from Upton's place right on out to the lake, just sailing. When we approached a drift, we'd yell 'Keep your feet up boys or you'll never get through.' The girls were just screaming. We didn't have many toys so we'd find crooked sticks from the swamp and frozen horse manure and play hockey on the lake. We were just lucky to be alive and have anything."

One of those girls was Mr. Mason's only sister, Myra, who was also one of Mr. Mason's best friends. After their parents died, they lived in the farmhouse together, each looking out for the other.

She never married because she simply wasn't interested, and Mr. Mason could never quite find Mrs. Right until he was 62 and in 1971 married teacher June Harrison, whose family was from the area.

Accustomed to making their own fun, no one would pass up the opportunity to travel the lakes on a special boat brought up by Matabanick Inn. In the winter the children would find crooked sticks from the swamp and play hockey on the lake using frozen manure as the puck.

"She seemed to me to be the right girl," he says, smiling across the table at his wife. "There was always just one thing that never suited me about the different girls I went out with. I remember telling Elvin's son David that I was engaged. 'Uncle Wilf,' he said, 'if I didn't know you didn't tell lies I wouldn't believe it.'"

Farming has been Wilfred Mason's life all these years. Only twice has he left Boshkung: once to help build Highway 35 and one year to attend agricultural college in Guelph. "Those were two of the happiest winters I put in."

Because there were few markets for crops in the Depression, Mr. Mason had to job out. "You've heard about the Dirty Thirties? I worked for 50 cents a day (at road Camp 10 at Lake Saskatchewan.) I worked in the kitchen from 5:30 in the morning until 9:30 at night and then I'd cut as many as four heads (of hair) at night after that. I made more at night than I did during the day."

He worked in the kitchen preparing the food and then often delivered it to the 140 men (at the peak) working outdoors. "I'd go out with the sleigh with great big covered containers they called Dixies."

"Jim Wright could make 17 pies out of a pound of lard. The crust was thin, mind you, but it would melt in your mouth. . . It was a jolly time. People were happier in those days, they made their own fun. That place just rang with laughter."

For that other memorable winter, Mr. Mason readily took up an offer to join his friend Leslie Prentice at the Ontario Agricultural College. The knowledge gained there did him well as he returned home to buy up more acreage on which to roam his cows and plant crops. "We had livestock and tried to grow our own feed, mostly oats, and very little wheat because you could buy flour quite reasonable. One year I had 220 bags of potatoes and I drove them as far away as Eagle Lake to sell them for 50 cents a bag — a 90 pound bag!"

With such hardships ahead of him, at one point Mr. Mason had dreams of becoming a teacher. After he passed his Entrance, the teacher agreed to teach a few of them Grade 9 and 10 courses so they wouldn't have to travel to Lindsay. Then fate stepped in to change his plans.

"Gordon Ball was the teacher and he wanted to go up north. He asked my dad, 'How can I make the connections?' Dad said 'We'll take you to Dorset by canoe and you can catch the boat from there.' Arthur Oliver, my cousin, said 'I'll go with you' and Dad and Art paddled him to Dorset."

"They had to go up and back in that day and there came a heavy rain and they got a chill. Dad got rheumatoid arthritis and it crippled him, his life was ruined. I couldn't have broken the home up. My parents had no other means of livelihood so I took over the farm. I didn't become a teacher but it was for the best, I guess. When I was dreaming of teaching in the West, I was looking forward to more than teaching. Family was there, with big farms."

And it's without regret Wilfred Mason tells the story today. Farming has been good to him, and he has enjoyed the simple life it has provided him.

"We enjoyed life," he says. "Just driving horses, riding in the hay in the nice weather, having picnics, eating fresh berries. We used to really enjoy our summer picnics; we'd get to meet the neighbours we seldom saw."

Such a simple recipe for happiness doesn't seem possible today but Wilfred and June Mason are still making it work. The farm house is much as it was 50 years ago and even though it's getting more difficult for them to take care of it, it's hard to imagine living anywhere else. Wilfred Mason's past lives here, and for him, the past was a pretty nice place to be.

Throughout the summer, we will be having profiles of people and places in Stanhope, which is celebrating its 125th anniversary, as well as Carnarvon's Zion United Church, which is celebrating its centennial.

GUILFORD'S CANADA DAY

Once again, the village does the country proud on July 1

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

THE SUN WAS SHINING and spirits were running high at Canada Day celebrations at West Guilford last weekend. Flag raisers Nicole Cooper and Danny Koz incited a round of cheers from the crowd. A proud Charlene Simms was chosen as Miss Canada Day and Mike Morrison was bequeathed the title of Mr. Canada Day for 1991.

Canada Day Citizen Bert Cowan could be seen making his way through the crowd, all smiles while he said his hellos.

D'Arcy O'Connor was the winner of the 1500 metre Pine Lake swim with Kim Elliot and Suzanne deMoor following in second and third place.

No one was at a loss for activities throughout the day, with round after round of horseshoes for the adults and potatoe sack races and a tug of war for the kids.

There were a lot of laughs (and a lot of spills) with wheelbarrow races for parents and their darling children. No doubt, there were a lot of sore arms and legs for a lot of enthusiastic kids the following day!

Bill Jo Stamp was winner of the decorated bicycle contest this year. There was also the annual nail drive, pie baking contest and amateur contest.

At the end of the day, Whitney Carr (81) was the eldest man in attendance, and to no one's surprise, Elva Cooper (91) was the eldest woman present.

The youngest boy registered for the day was Nathan Woodcock, born February 14, 1991. And the youngest girl was Tiffany-Lynn Howard, born June 18, 1991.

Kids and their parents had enough activities to keep them busy on Canada Day in West Guilford. Clockwise from upper right: Joining together in tug of war; Kevin Sisson and son Joe joined in the wheelbarrow race; Gregory Nimigon escaped the heat in Pine Lake; and Shereen Cooper explains to her son Adam how to win the 20-yard dash

Answering the Call:

New priest's path brings him to Haliburton

by ED WHITE

Staff Reporter

IN A SOCIETY where religion is becoming less and less a part of people's lives, coming to Haliburton County is a Godsend for its newest Anglican minister.

"The Parish of Haliburton is a very close community, very intertwined with the community around it, which is a good thing," says Robert Luxton, who will be preaching in Wilberforce, Haliburton and West Guilford. "Here it's warm and welcoming. People in cities don't even know who their priest is. In a place like this you're much more a part of people's lives."

Luxton, an assistant curate, arrived here June 1 to a friendly reception. He graduated this year with a Masters of Divinity from the Anglican Church's Wycliffe College at the University of Toronto. During the three-year program he became the president of the student council, and worked in churches and social organizations in Toronto.

He worked for eight months at a church in Scarborough preaching, reading and visiting people, as well as performing baptisms and confirmations.

The year before, he worked at the Stop 103 Food Bank, where he learned a lot about poverty and social problems. "Coming from a middle class background, it helped me appreciate the plight of less fortunate people. They face a lot of problems. They're not welfare bums."

"Many working people find with the high cost of rental housing they run short and have trouble feeding their families. They're ashamed to be there — they're not milking the system — and it showed me a lot about the problems in society."

In his third year at Wycliffe, Luxton helped arrange and perform the services held at the college. The students were broken into four groups of four people each and were given one week a month to conduct the worship. Since there were services twice a day, Luxton says they learned a lot about organization.

Luxton will share the parish with John Phillips until August, when Phillips is leaving, but then, until a replacement can be found Luxton will serve the parish alone.

He is looking forward to working here, since the parish is very dynamic. "It has grown a lot in last few years, particularly since John's been here. A lot of people have moved up here and joined the church. It's a mixed congregation, there are different age groups, families, single people, children, youths, retired and working people, it's a nice mixed congregation."

"There's a lot of spirit, a lot of love, and that's all part of the community — they reach out and bring people in to the church. The church is a part of life, a part of natural life."

Like many people, Luxton has not always known what career he would follow. For four years he worked in the accounting and administration department of a food wholesaling company (he has a degree in business administration from Ryerson Polytechnical in Toronto). But something drew him to the church, and although it was less dramatic than Saul's blinding on the road to Damascus, Luxton says "I was involved in my church in Toronto, and I got a sense of calling to the ordained ministry. If you had said to me 10 years ago that I'd be doing this I would have said 'No way.' It's all a big change for me."

Luxton came here as part of the church's attempt to encourage the rural ministry, and will serve here for a year as a deacon, before he becomes a fully-fledged priest.

FINE FAREWELL: Family members were on hand at the Reverend Dawn Gilbey's farewell tea at St. James Anglican Church in Kinmount last Sunday. From left are daughter Tracey, husband Ken, Dawn Gilbey, Chris McDonagh, daughter Karla and Ed Rajca. Mrs. Gilbey is taking over a parish in Toronto and will be missed.

It's always hard to say farewell

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

She was blessed with the energy to lead three churches, but now it's time to move on, says Reverend Dawn Gilbey.

After four years at St. James Anglican Church in Kinmount, Mrs. Gilbey gave her last service on Sunday. She was also minister at St. Luke's Anglican Church in Burnt River and St. John's Anglican Church in Irondale. After a short vacation, she will start her duties at St. George's Anglican Church in Scarborough on August 1.

"She's been fabulous," say the Osbornes, members of the St. Luke's congregation, at last Sunday's going-away tea in Kinmount. "She has awakened the whole church in this area."

"She's given an awful lot, but her new charge will be a challenge," says Mrs. Osborne. "I think we'll be visiting her in Scarborough. She'll pull up her socks," she says with a chuckle.

"There's a warmth that we've never experienced before," says Joyce Hills of St. James. "I didn't know people in the other two parishes, but she's got us all working together, loving each other."

"If you ask for help, you get help," says Hills, who lost her husband last year. "She makes you believe there's a living God out there in every creature."

"The Anglican religion has moved on because she welcomes everyone to our communion regardless of race, religion or creed. She certainly has made this corner a better place to live."

Mrs. Gilbey was also the chief motivator behind an addition to the church which was completed just two weeks ago.

"She's been wonderful. We're really going to miss her. And this is the first minister I can say that about and really mean it," says Jean Hollobon, who has lived in Kinmount for 10 years.

Bill Bath first met Dawn Gilbey a year ago February. His wife Annette had reached out to Mrs. Gilbey when he became very ill with cancer and was in a Peterborough hospital dying.

"She led the Lord to me as I was making my peace. She counselled me and prepared me for death and through Rev. Gilbey, my wife, friends and the power of prayer, I was healed."

"She has been a God-send. She reaches out and shares. I know a lot of the ladies of this congregation have been healed with the loss of their husbands because she is such a sharing and loving person."

"She has led us with compassion, authority and teaching and she has been an asset not just to church-going people but to the community of Kinmount as a whole."

Municipality of Dysart et al

NOTICE

PUBLIC MEETING CONCERNING A PROPOSED UPDATE TO THE OFFICIAL PLAN AND THE ZONING BY-LAW OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF DYSART ET AL

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Corporation of the United Townships of Dysart et al will hold a formal public meeting on Saturday, August 17, 1991 at 11:00 a.m. in the auditorium of the Dysart Community Centre in Haliburton to consider a proposed Official Plan Update and Zoning By-law Update under Section 17 and 34 of the Planning Act, 1983 as amended. The proposed amendments will incorporate a number of small changes to the documents in addition to the following specific updates:

- update the goals and objectives of the Municipality
- add policies on Heritage Conservation
- limit condominium and medium density development
- designate shoreline residential and commercial tourists uses throughout the Municipality
- permit two family dwellings in all residential areas
- add policies on shoreline preservation
- add policies on Rural Residential development
- add development standards for estate residential development
- add temporary use and holding provisions

ANY PERSON may attend the public meeting and/or make written or verbal representations regarding the proposed update.

In addition, the Municipality will hold an informal Public Open House on Saturday, July 13, 1991 from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at the Municipal Office in Haliburton to make available copies of the proposed Official Plan and Zoning By-law Update. These documents will not be available prior to this meeting. Staff and consultants will be present to answer questions.

Questions regarding this matter should be directed to the Planning Department at 705-457-1740.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Choir's past voices join together again

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN
McKAY

A lovely wedding took place on June 22nd at St. Peter's Church, Maple Lake when Brad Archer and Anne McLaughlin were united in marriage. The reception was held at the Matabanic. Guests came from as far away as Searchmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Thomas of Sturgeon Falls and Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Thomas are spending a holiday in Cape Cod.

We welcome our summer residents back again and hope they have a pleasant and safe vacation.

Zion Choir's Berry Entertainment was a great

Choir when 32 members of past and present Choirs and Choir leaders raised their voices in Praise and brought many happy memories to the congregation, the day before they met for practice and a dinner in the C.E. Building and later watched movies of themselves and others in their younger day. They came from many parts of the province. The one coming from farthest was Colin Russell of Australia and his brother Ron of Baltimore U.S.A. The entire Russell family were present. It was nice to see former residents in the consuccess on both nights, with people being unable to buy tickets at the door. Both evenings were sold out early. The choir is to be congratulated for work and hours of practise that was put into this venture.

We welcome back summer visitors and hope they enjoy their stay!

Rev. Moll and family will be on vacation during July. Should a minister's services be needed please call Rev. Spencely at 457-2755 or Fred Elson at 286-3227.

Intended for last week

Sunday June 30 was a memorable day in the history of our Church

GATHERING OF THE CLANS: The Wright and Pearsall families held their first reunion at the Ronald Wright residence in Irondale recently. The fete was attended by 150 people, coming from as far away as PEI, Quebec, Toronto, Keswick, Ottawa and Peterborough. Along with conversation, there was plenty of food and laughter.

Genealogists trace past at many local cemeteries

by JUNE PARTRIDGE

Angus Baxter, a noted Genealogist/author will be guest speaker on Saturday September 7, 1991 at 2 p.m. at Anglican Church in Minden. Tickets for $5. are available from Haliburton Genealogy Group, Box 567, Minden, Ont. K0M 2K0. There is a limit of 80 tickets.

The group's latest meeting was June 26th in Minden. There are 15 paid members and no bills to pay, with a small bank balance. The Cemetery Recording Coordinator, Cec Rowe, had several letters regarding the group's work on the cemetery recording and the copies for files that will be kept at the Minden Library for use by any genealogist.

The Cemetery on 12 Mile Lake is the next one to be recorded, starting on the first week in July. All genealogists willing to give a few days of their time, contact Cec at 286-3702. Betts Mugridge has been asked to do the Kidd & MacGilvray cemeteries. Pictures of all cemeteries will be taken as they are recorded and will be kept on file.

A logo has been chosen and already appears on the completed Cemetery Records. The group will have caps and T-shirts to wear at a special Seminar on Sept. 7.

The Pedigree Coordinator has organized all charts received to date on file cards and linked any who are researching the same names. Several mail inquiries have been answered and links have been made there as well.

Seminar flyers designed and printed by Henry Clemow are out to several nearby genealogy groups. Tickets are available now, as noted above.

The group is well represented in a visible way by Carol Miles at the Minden Museum. If you have any questions about genealogy or the group or the history of this area, be sure to make this a stop while you are sightseeing.

Focus of the meeting was land records and how to research with them, and how to interpret the information. Jerry Rome gave an excellent talk on this topic. This avenue can help show the movement of your ancestors, how long they lived in one spot and often when they died.

The group's next regular meeting, after the Sept. 7 Seminar is Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Celebrations great success

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR
COOPER

July 1, 1991, dawned bright and fair for all the celebrations at the Centre. Crowds grew over the day and swelled to the extended crowd whose cars lined both sides of the road from Steven's corner to past the store and Nila Reynolds' house. Fireworks crowned the end of a day of festivities and competition. Races for children went on all afternoon. Horseshoes and cross-cut saw competitors, swimmers, wheelbarrow racers all participated with keen enjoyment.

Prizes were awarded and caps distributed to all kids who competed. Charlene Simms, granddaughter of Carl and Corrine Simms, was Queen of the day and Mike Morrison, son of Mike and Sue, king for the day, and chosen the previous night at the annual teen dance at the centre.

Many thanks to the organizers under the direction of Greg Cooper, president of the Centre Committee, who is building on the well-founded skills laid years ago by Carol Stamp, still active on the executive.

Congratulations to Bert Cowen, citizen of the year, Well deserved!

On Tuesday, July 2 the Youth Group under the direction of Sandy and Ken Stevens, the Rev. John and Florajean Phillips, played baseball at the Centre's ball field. After a swim in Pine Lake they enjoyed refreshments in the basement of St. Andrew's church. The group is always planning and supervising worthwhile activities.

Congratulations to Steve & Marianne Howard on the birth of their daughter, Tiffany-Lynn, on June 18, 1991.

Legion bringing Suburbanairs to Highlands

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

Everyone is excited about the first and unique musical event, "Harmony Happenings" to be sponsored by Branch 129

Seniors Club, and to be held in the Legion hall on July 21 featuring the Suburbanairs. We are in a position to present this popular group at low cost. For the finest in music, comedy and laughter, don't miss this day of family entertainment. Tickets and details available from Legion Seniors.

The Blood Donors Clinic sponsored by Branch 129, and chaired by Cde. Jack Bassett, will be held on July 9, from 2:00 to 8:00 p.m. You could save a life by donating a pint of blood.

Congratulations to Branch 129 contestants, who, once again, have captured the honours in the F4 golf tournament. Special thanks to Beryl Gorin who coordinated the excellent competition.

Welcome to new members, Stuart Keller and Cliff Kirkham who were initiated at the General Meeting on Thursday night.

Background workers, so vital to the Branch, do about their work quietly, and sometimes unnoticed. As a result of Max McKay and Jack Bannan helping Dave Stirett each day last week, the electrical work for Bluegrass in Glebe Park is ready for inspection.

Bluegrass chairman, Jim Tice, is asking volunteers to sign the Bluegrass sheets in the clubroom for their choice of work areas.

Tickets are on sale in the Clubroom at $20. per couple for the President's Ball on July 20.

The Legion Pipe Band has been busy with engagements. Its next one is July 14 at the Zone Drumhead in Brechin.

Two flea markets sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary on July 6 and July 27 keep the women busy.

Happy birthday to Verna Draper and Marg Finlay who will be honoured at a 70th birthday party by the L.A. on Monday. These amazing Ladies have allowed neither cancer nor heart surgery to dampen their dedication to the Auxiliary work.

Best wishes to our sick comrades, and to our latest accident victim, Steve Juby.

The 1129 Cadet Corps are having a busy summer.

Nine are leaving on a six-week Leadership course in Ipperwash, and four are going on a two-week Basic Army Cadet course. Jeremy Duff will attend a six-week Cadet Leader instructor Course, and Mike

Morrison will attend the Athletic Instructor course at Camp Borden. Thanks to all who support the Cadet Corps by buying tickets and attending their sale. The doll was won by Mrs. Kay and the afghan by Tanya Allaire. Outstanding Cadet Christopher Dair will attend Ipperwash this summer and will be off to college this fall.

The next General Meeting will be on August 1 at 8:00 p.m.

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

The South Wilberforce United Church was filled with mourners on Thurs. June 27th when relatives and friends attended a service for Hubert Dunford. Hubert, the grandson of one of Monmouth's earliest pioneers Richard Dunford, grew up on a farm in Tory Hill. He took over the farm from his father Fred Dunford, married Irma Bowen and they raised a family of five children. About seven years ago the farm was sold and Hubert and Irma moved to Wilberforce. Hubert was interested in Township affairs and served on the Monmouth Council. He worked on the Recreation Board, was a member of the Senior Citizen Club and attended the United Church. He will be remembered by many. The sympathy of the community is extended to the family.

I don't know how we missed writing about the birth of Grant Arthur Waymouth but this fine boy was born on May 9th at the Centenary Hospital in Scarborough. He weighed 6 lbs. 8-1/2 ozs. and is the pride and joy of his grandparents, Doris and Dennis Waymouth of Elephant Lake. Karen and Ted Waymouth are the happy parents and their joy is shared by Grandparents May and Don Grant of Scarborough.

As this is our last news letter until September, here are a few local things that will brighten vacation time. For the children there will be daily swimming lessons at Lake Wilbermore under the direction of Kelly Strong. For July and August a Day Camp will be held in the Curling Rink Monday to Friday. At the Library children's films will be shown Thursday afternoons from 2 to 3.

For the grown ups: Bingo every Monday evening at the Lloyd Watson

Centre; Bingo at the Harcourt Recreation centre every Wednesday evening; Euchre at Highland Grove Monday nights, lunch included; Bridge games at Tory Hill Recreation Centre on Tuesday nights.

You can catch the girl's baseball games Wednesday evenings at the Wilberforce Ball Park. There are tennis courts nearby. At Harcourt the Grenville Martin Soft Ball Tournament takes place July 12, 13 and 14. Country Good Times will be here July 19, 20 and 21 and the Monmouth Agricultural Fair takes place August 2 and 3rd. These are some of the events scheduled for July and August. Have a pleasant summer.

Minden W.I. will be present at county fair

by JEANNE SEARS

On a hot June 19th, members of Minden Women's Institute met at the home of Gwen Cox. After the W.I. grace was sung, all enjoyed the pot luck buffet, eating out on the deck. There were 14 members present and four guests were made welcome. The usual reports were given and Irene Moore had sent 16 cards since the last meeting. Collections were taken for Card Fund and Pennies for Friendship. Dates of our Bake Sales are Fri. July 5 and Fri. Aug. 2nd at the Gazebo by the Minden bridge after 9:30 a.m. Pres. Jeanne Sears thanked all who helped with supplies or serving at the Fashion Show and Drop-in tea. The new programs and Home and Country Magazines were given out. Our District Director Mary Cox gave a full report of District Annual held at Fenelon Falls, May 14th.

There was mention made of the crafts for our display at Minden Fair. Also some discussion re a bus trip and this was left over to the September meeting. Audrey Thrasher, Victoria East District President, thanked us for inviting her and Wendy Flett, District Secretary Treasurer. The latter read several amusing items.

We then adjourned until next meeting at Common Room September 18th at 2 with all ladies welcome.

Chamber learns its lessons

TAX WATCH

by: GARY KENNEY & JOHN BEACHLI

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY Chamber of Commerce took a sucker-punch in the County's '91 budget. For years there had always been an understanding that tax dollars would be used to support the Chamber's activities and smooth out blips in the year's cash flow of membership fees. The honeymoon ended in March when County Council sliced and diced its contribution to a fraction of 1990's total, and used the difference to set up a new Planning/Development ivory tower.

The ambush has had four significant but not necessarily disastrous results.

1. The Chamber has learned not to hang its financial security on the whims of political agendas that change yearly. It is mildly obscene to imagine an association of business people, entrepreneurs, and private family companies competing for tax dollars alongside social service agencies.

2. Business people, who have to grapple with weekly budgets to squeak out full value for every dollar spent, have no collective voice to criticize a 35.7 percent budget hike in the middle of a recession. How can a Chamber of Commerce be critical of a budget when that same set of numbers supports their very existence?

3. Local business people have been embarrassed by their own elected neighbours and reduced to just another "special interest group" waiting for a government handout. On the one hand the Warden offers a carrot that "maybe next year we can give more to the Chamber", and on the other hand the County Economic Development Officer justifies his new job by deriding local businesses in a news release as mostly self serving profit seekers that unlike his department do not have the community interests in mind.

4. The Chamber of Commerce will not die. But it will have to become a true Chamber of Commerce that points out to people such as our Planner/Development Officer that "profit" for most local business people is really a "wage", that most volunteer community organizations could not survive without the support of local businesses.

The Chamber will always need a tourist marketing board to promote the Highlands, and yes even negotiate with politicians for tax dollars to be contracted against marketing services provided. But if it continues to stand in line for tax handouts, it reduces all members to neutered beggars that are more a part of our tax problems than part of the solution they should be.

Runners heading to Minden for race

On Friday, August 2, the 20th Annual Heineken Yard Roadrace will be held at Minden. This renowned country footrace attracts over 400 runners from across Ontario and neighbouring U.S. states. Over the past twenty years, the Heineken Yard has become "the Haliburton Highlands' Most Venerable Roadrace".

In 1986, the event was organized for the first time by our organization called AMICI. This group of former camp staff has been supporting needy youngsters at summer camps throughout Ontario since 1966. With the support of its sponsors, Heineken Breweries and Runner's choice, AMICI will again be organizing this event in 1991 to help contribute to this excellent cause.

Runners may register on race day in Minden and take the free shuttle bus to the start.

The race starts at 6:00 p.m. sharp and carries on over 4.3 miles of rolling country to finish in Minden with an exciting sprint down Main Street. Prizes and certificates will be awarded to all finishers — special trophies will be awarded to both men and women in Junior, Open, and Master divisions. Three team trophies will also be awarded to the top corporate, club and camp teams.

The entry fee is $10 before July 19th and $12 afterwards with all proceeds going directly to AMICI to send children to summer camp.

Kawartha lakes are losing water

On Monday, June 24, the Haliburton area lakes averaged 89 percent full, within their usual range. This was the lowest by this date since 1988. However, it is only 1 percent below the 10-year average. The lakes averaged 5 percent below this level at the same date in the summer of 1988, when the navigation season also began with very hot, dry conditions.

The dry conditions over all of Southern Ontario have taken a toll on Lake Simcoe-Couchiching and the Kawartha lakes of the canal route as well. Despite the running of minimum flows from the Kawartha's the past two weeks, their levels have slipped and a draw of reservoir water from Haliburton has been required this week (ending June 29). Evaporation is taking so much water that with all stoplogs in, at many of the dams of the lower Trent River, the levels do not hold. In effect, almost all of the Otonabee River flow at Lakefield is lost to evaporation before it reaches Trenton.
